Carmel honors its veterans

VETERANS WERE honored at Carmel's Devendorf Park with flowers, speeches, and the Seventh Infantry Division (Light) Honor Guard (above) as Carmel area residents joined the nation on Veterans' Day Nov. 11 in honoring the men and women who died or were wounded in the service of their country. Taking a stroll after the ceremonies (above right) were retired U.S. Army Col. Shelburn Robinson and retired Col. John Tominac, a Congressional Medal of Honor winner and one of the day's speakers. Carmel's Coco Cunningham (right), honored three Carmel High School friends of hers who died in the war in Vietnam. Their names are engraved on a plaque on a monument erected in the park by American Legion Post No. 512. The plaque reads simply: "In the Memory of Carmel Servicemen Whose Blood Was Shed That We Might Live." (Holly McFarland photos.)

MAYOR'S REPORT

Peace and harmony

THE BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

WHAT A fantastic weekend the birthday celebration turned out to be. I would like to personally thank Gunnar Norberg for suggesting it and selling the Council on the idea. I think special thanks should also go to Jody LeTowt, Betty Ghint, Sandy Farrell, Bud Allen, Judith Reese, the Carmel Business Association, and all of the many volunteers who donated their time for this event. It certainly would not have worked so well, if at all, without them.

TOWN HALL MEETING

Last Monday's Town Hall meeting was the first in many years and I would love to see a continuing process at least every six months to give people the chance to express their ideas in an informal atmosphere — not locked in by the structure of a city council meeting. The dialogue for the most part was extremely constructive and I would like to thank everyone for their participation. It was unfortunate that I had to cut one lady short; however, she was reading a prepared statement she had read before the city council four months ago (under "Appearances") and there was absolutely nothing constructive or new being offered. Also, from my vantage point, I could see the majority of the audience shifting restlessly and many people exiting. This was not fair for the Beach Task Force presentation as it is very important to have as much citizen input on the item as possible.

The presentation by David Shonman and Jean Grace was extremely well done, and because this does change the cosmetics of Scenic Avenue and requires a rather large sum of money, we wanted as much public input as possible. Many good arguments were presented both pro and con.

I understand The Pine Cone will be running a poll in an upcoming issue as well as pro and con opinions. The Pine Cone's poll during the election turned out to be reasonably accurate.

WOLF OR COYOTE

Both are pack animals that tear their victims apart. Last week's Pine Cone had some critical comments which I believe, as a matter of information, should be answered.

One was Councilman James "Lone Wolf" Wright's assertion that he wanted to be a team player but there was no chance of that. This is just not true. Councilman Wright has made no move whatsoever to be a team player in the time I've known him. The last two monthly meetings he has announced he would have to leave somewhere at the midway point to go to another meeting on the (Alan Knight) Maritime Museum. I said "fine" as I know this is a project close to his heart, even though there were questions from other council members as to why he had not remained to participate on the consent calendar, ordinances, and various resolutions that needed to be addressed.

So, in the last meeting he commenced with some very sarcastic rhetoric about the General Plan Committee, then got up and left the rest of the council to handle the remaining agenda. This hardly seems like teamwork — which is usually assumed to be a two-way street with give and take on both sides.

The General Plan Committee has worked very hard and has come up with some very important suggestions. One is their proposed ordinance for legalizing second kitchens (or subordinate units). To me, this proposed ordinance is certainly pro-resident and will not place undue hardships on the residents of this community.

Speaking of being pro-resident, I invite anyone interested to procure a copy of the former proposed ordinance on second kitchens (85-6) of which Mr. Wright was one of the leading architects. That ordinance was promptly and properly dubbed "The Gestapo Ordinance" by former Mayor Norberg and many others in our community. Opinions on this from city employees as far away as San Diego have been given to me, most of them agreeing they have never read anything quite like it in their lives.

Mr. Wright's comment that he stopped attending the General Plan Committee meetings "out of disgust," was something like a spoiled child picking up his toys and going home. Many other citizens (Howard Nieman, Jr. and Anne Woolworth) have disagreed with some of the recommendations of the General Plan Committee but they still attend the meetings and participate.

When I asked Mr. Wright who he would like to see fill Helen Arnold's council seat, he suggested the next highest vote getters, (Robert) Stephenson or (David) Maradei. Well, ladies and gentlemen, the next highest vote getter was a thousand votes back and wouldn't the public have liked that — appointing someone who had been so thoroughly removed from office as either one of those two?

WAR AND PEACE

I don't like war on any level. It takes a lot more than professing to be anti-business to show that you are pro-resident. I don't know of any responsible member of the community who is not pro-resident. It troubles me that certain people want to perpetuate a war — residential community versus business community.

It was stated in The Pine Cone last week that I was anti-business. Actually, I was trying to express that Carmel maybe didn't need more business and that we should all help to encourage high quality and perhaps more residential-oriented businesses. No one is for expanding the size of the business district, but it has had some rather odd boundaries sometimes running through the middle of blocks, etc. It certainly won't hurt to analyze simplification of its boundaries.

I also don't understand the obsession some have about the Little family project on San Carlos Street. The Carmel Sands Motel is an ugly '40s modern building, and I see nothing wrong with tearing it down and replacing is with a more attractive building that has almost double the parking and will save thousands of gallons in water. Many Carmel residents miss the June Simpson Restaurant, which was of high quality.

I think most developments within the business district would be in the way of refurbishing or replacement of existing structures. Most of these structures or refurbishing jobs should be scrutinized by the planning commission and/or the council, but there is definitely no need to cause war between the two factions in the community. After all, the proposed beach walkway, parking structure, library annex and parking structure, senior housing project and parking would be financed in a large part by the hostelry tax and the business community. If we were to accept their money for luxuries like the beach walkway, there's no reason why we can't all expend a little effort towards peace and harmony in the community.

(Editor's Note: In the past The Pine Cone has given a forum to city council members, most recently former Councilman David Maradei in his column "Twenty Percent Opinion" and a few years before that, former Mayor Barney Laiolo in his "Mayor's Report." (Former Mayor Charlotte Townsend declined to write a column.) Mayor Clint Eastwood, after several requests by The Pine Cone, agreed to write an occasional column under the old heading "Mayor's Report." This is the first of them.)

Library in a bank?

Dear Editor:

In Carmel, Alan Greenspan's law on economics and the Congress is at work. By the time the city council gets around to completing the new library annex, the solution will be irrelevant. We can change that law.

The Crocker Bank building is a neat alternative. We get a quick increase in library space that will be good into the future. There is no need for complex and uncertain legalities in a parking deal with the Pine Inn, or an amended environmental impact report and reviews, or time delays on account of the water allocation, or extra high construction costs, or cost overruns, or loss of important parking, or more spillover parking in nearby residential neighborhoods, or loss of badly needed downtown open space for upper-canopy trees that add to business values, or a specialized building that will be sold at a loss when library space needs again surge, or cramming and packing the downtown with another building at an awkward intersection.

The Crocker Bank building is superior. A start-up library annex can be opened in obout 120 days. This site gives a bundle of spillover benefits: open space and landscaping as a fine visual extension of Devendorf Park; relief from the many adverse impacts of commercial construction and uses; easy access from three sides; level walk-in from the parking area for older people — a fundamental at public buildings; reasonable closeness to the main library; no water questions; and, minor fix-up costs.

Wells Fargo, the owner, will probably sell on installment payments fitted to city budgets over many years in return for tax-free interest income. The library endowment fund can then remain intact to produce operating income that keeps up the traditionally high cultural integrity of Carmel. City capital funds will be husbanded for other projects such as a corporation yard near the Carmel Middle School and Mission Ranch.

New construction behind the Pine Inn will not do much good down the road. There is no room for library expansion. Space needs will be 25,000 square feet in 20 years according to library consultant Ray Holt in his 1985 report. The main library has 6,300. The bank building has 7,800 plus 19, or more, parking spaces and place for a delivery dock at grade level with a separate driveway. There is plenty of room for expansion when needed. An adjacent parcel may be bought or the large existing basement may be broadly extended. Neither will harm the parking or open space.

The matter is simply one of smart value accounting that goes beyond the confines of short-term library-only thinking.

Carmel art fraud?

Dear Editor:

The issue of art fraud in Carmel has been raised before. I wish to voice my opinion. As a collector, I began acquiring art six years ago in Carmel. I research to protect the integrity of the art I own and have studied the laws of full disclosure, false advertising and deceptive practices. I have found that a major gallery in Carmel has been advertising falsely, not informing the consumer according to law, and practicing deceptive sales methods. Their advertisement for a work of art by a major artist was, in fact, created by Michael Spalakavich.

Fraud is being practiced in Carmel; however, to what extent I am not sure. This issue has been raised before the previous and current mayor at city council meetings by gallery owners and artists. The mayor said he would investigate, asked for leadership on this issue, and requested us to "take the heat." I will take the heat. I have made these accusations and will stand by them. I have the facts and I am right.

My crusade against art fraud in Carmel will continue until the situation is remedied. In an attempt to clear this problem up locally I have contacted the Carmel Licensing Review Board, local police fraud department and the district attorney's office. I promise to reach larger audiences every week. When the public outside Carmel hears me, it will create suspicion about the integrity of all art in our city.

The 'blue paper'

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank everyone that credited me with the writing of the now well-known "Blue Paper." I wish I could say that I had thought it up as it was remarkably solid in its statement of the issues. The mayor asked for input and that was its purpose.

A democratic society places an enormous responsibility on its citizens and an informed constituency is vital to good government.

Let us hope that the blue paper of last week was the beginning of a series from our obviously concerned citizens. We need all the information we can get in order that all decisions to be made represent us, the residents of Carmel.

U.S. Forest Service plan may kill Big Sur intervention

By DAVID LELAND

IF THE U.S. Forestry Service follows recommendations provided by state and county officials plus concerned Big Sur residents, it is hoped that there will be little need for federal interference, such as Sen. Pete Wilson's Big Sur bill, when Congress convenes next year.

The forest service is now in the process of evaluating public comments regarding its Los Padres National Forest Draft Land and Resources Management Plan. The deadline for public input was Oct. 30, with the forestry department hoping to have a working plan in operation by year's end, according to Jerry Little, acting forest supervisor.

The 1.34-million acre Los Padres National Forest stretches from Los Angeles County north to Carmel Valley and occupies 2,756 square miles.

In essence, what the supporters of the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan are hoping to accomplish by some key revisions in the forest management plan is to eliminate the need for federal interference by establishing the Big Sur Land Use Plan as a model for the Big Sur Area.

"There's no need for the Wilson bill," said Jim Josoff, general chairman of Friends of the Big Sur Coast.

Last year Wilson attempted to introduce legislation which would have increased federal presence in the Los Padres National Forest by placing it under the auspices of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Residents of Big Sur and its surrounding areas feared that the responsibility for maintaining the forest's natural atmosphere would be too far removed from the actual wilderness area and decisions would be made which were not in its best interests.

Wilson's bill died last month when it failed to advance beyond the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee on Public Lands.

According to a spokesman for Wilson, it is unclear whether the Republican senator will reintroduce the proposed bill when the 100th Congress convenes next year.

ONE OF the principal proponents of establishing a model for Big Sur under its land use plan has been Rep. Leon Panetta.

In a letter sent to the U.S. Forest Service in Goleta, Panetta gave an overview of his views and goals for the Big Sur area.

"We want to shift away from active enhancement or development of the area," he wrote. "(And) towards reiteration of Big Sur in its natural state."

About 3 million people visit the Big Sur region each year, Josoff said. Most of these people, however, are travelling from one location to another and are not using Big Sur as their primary destination.

Also in his letter to the forest service Panetta points to a number of areas concerning Big Sur. These are:

- Make it a priority to maintain Big Sur as a visual resource — all other things are subordinate.
- Make sure any development of the Big Sur area would not encourage any increase in use. It was feared that Wilson's bill to create a "national forest scenic area" would be an attempt to attract more tourists to Big Sur.
- Forest service lands would be withdrawn from any leases concerning mineral and oil development or rights.
- Pursue any federal land already leased for mineral and oil drilling and attempt to buy out its leaseholder. It was unclear where these funds would be derived from.
- All forest service development would be coordinated with an "inter-agency."

The inter-agency has been one of the projects with the "Coastal Partnership," a group of Big Sur residents, county and state officials and Panetta.

Its attempt is to combine all state and federal agencies under the same umbrella so each organization knows what the other is doing. In other words, to keep the lines of communication open.

The Coastal Partnership is also attempting to raise $25 million to compensate landowners who may never build on their land, due to the moratorium surrounding Highway 1.

Josoff said the money would be raised by private contributions, bond issues and corporate donations.

- Asks forest service to establish a "federal zone" delineating federal lands from county lands.
- Asks to abolish the policy of "in-holding." This means that any people owning property on federal lands would not have to fear having their property bought out from underneath them by the federal government.
- Says to preclude the use of any chemical methods in the Big Sur Wilderness with regard to creating fire breaks.
- Encourage the retention of native plant species.

ACCORDING TO Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, the area in question involves one-half federal land and one-half county land. With this in mind, the county planning department made its recommendation to the forest service in a letter dated Oct. 29.

"In general, we find the Draft Forest Plan provides a complete management program which reflects an acceptable mix of numerous activities while allowing for protection of a variety of resources," said Bob Slimmon, county planning director, referring to the voluminous 300-page document.

"We strongly believe the Big Sur Land Use Plan should be incorporated as the STANDARD (sic) for each appropriate element/management practice," Slimmon continued. "The certified Big Sur LUP is the standard by which both Monterey County and the Coastal Commission will review any federally proposed development for consistency.

"Monterey County and the California Coastal Commission have over the years developed a coastal partnership in Big Sur and we recommend the Forest Service join that partnership to provide for a consistent application of standards for development."

Again, the overall goal of the Coastal Partnership is to make sure there are not two separate sets of rules governing the Los Padres National Forest.

"I want to make sure the layout is tied down," said Strasser Kauffman, member of the Coastal Partnership. "So we can assume there will be cooperation between the city and county government in the years to come."

While the forestry department hopes to have a comprehensive plan in effect by January, there are several steps which must be completed before this can be accomplished.

Little said, begining next week, key comments would be pulled from the correspondence and assigned to teams composed of forestry officials. They will write, "issue papers" regarding each item addressed.

After this, a copy of their comments will be sent to each concerned area for the public to read — but basically the public input process has been completed, Little said.

But this does not mean concerned citizens are impotent.

"If someone is upset, I'm sure we'll hear about it," Little said. He said any serious problems would be looked at further by the forestry service.

Little said that what the forest service is aiming for is a working general plan for the next decade; this does not mean there will not be any changes allowed within the plan.

He added that any development suggested in the Los Padres National Forest, on a local level, would be subject to an environmental impact report and public hearings.

"The forest land use plan is much like the county's general plan," Little said. A general plan states the overall goals of an area, but addresses particular items as they arise.

Little said he is aware of the controversy regarding the Wilson bill and believes the forest service will act accordingly.

"I know that people feel that way (regarding the Wilson bill), he said. "It is our feeling to be consistent with the Big Sur Coastal Plan."

Planning commission grapples with R-4 zoning revisions

By NANCY HILLS

IN A four-hour marathon session the Carmel Planning Commission considered the future of three major Carmel properties.

The commissioners on Wednesday, Nov. 5 heard testimony from attorneys, realtors, neighbors, contractors and engineers while discussions continue on development parameters for the R-4, Louise Bennett property and the Countess Kinnoull estate. More workshops are scheduled in November and December.

As the meeting ended, property-owner profits became a topic of debate between some members of the planning commission, in particular Bruce Roberts, and Carmel developer Alan Williams, representing two R-4 property owners and backed by attorney Don Hubbard. The discussion centered around basing density on the economics of development.

"I don't think our concern should be whether property owners make money on a project," Roberts said, after listening to Williams, Hubbard and another attorney, Jim Heisinger, who represented R-4 owner Bob Murphy.

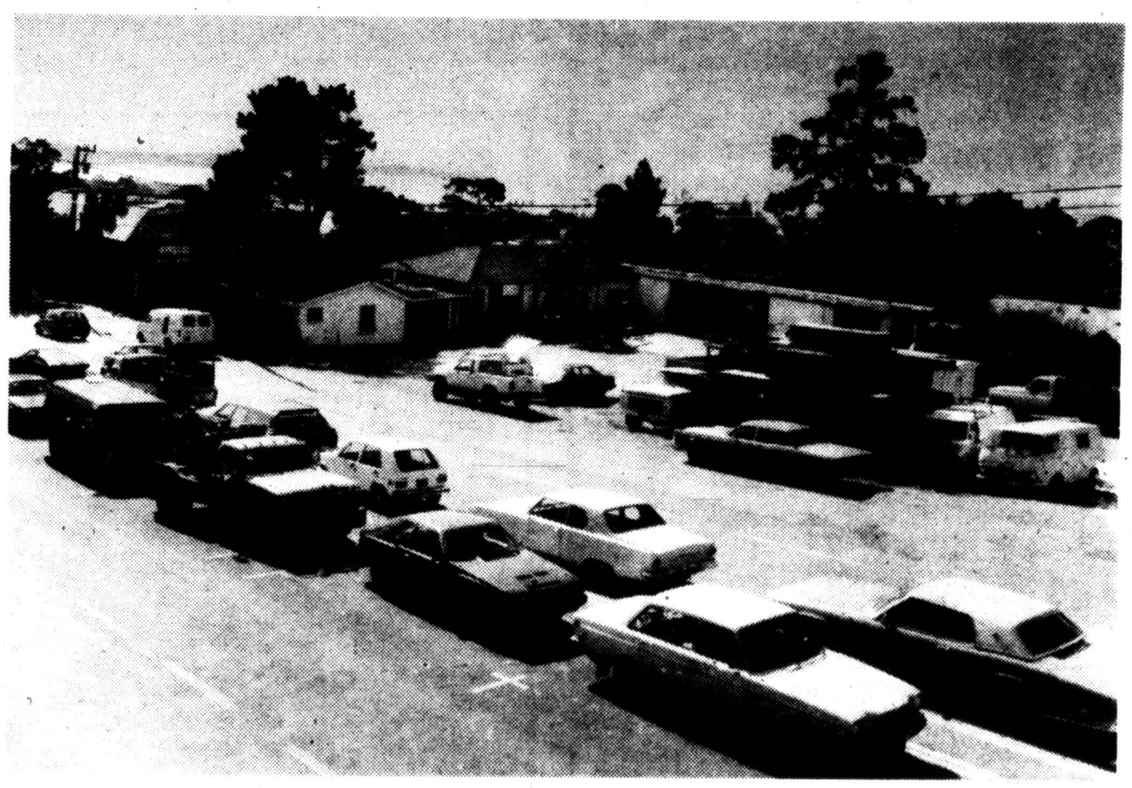
"We've never asked to make a huge profit," Williams responded. "If anyone wanted to be a developer and make a huge profit they certainly wouldn't be one in Carmel. We only want something that is economically viable."

"What if we have to go from something like 60 up to 88 units per acre in order to make money, then all of a sudden the city of Carmel is stuck with something (it doesn't want)," Roberts countered.

Commissioner Ed Hicks backed Roberts up, stating that "when you are speaking of the value of land, it's worth what it returns."

Land value depends on how much can be built on it, Hicks said, because the constructed buildings would cost the same anywhere.

Commission Chairman Ken White remarked that "What Commissioner Roberts expressed is in the back of everyone's mind."



PRESERVING THE views of Point Lobos, shown here from Hayward Lumber upper yard over Junipero Avenue and the lower lumber yard, is just one of the items for the Carmel Planning Commission to consider while developing a specific plan for the R-4 district. (Holly McFarland photo.)

The final comment was made by attorney Don Hubbard, representing R-4 property owner Tom Handley. Hubbard told the commission there were "two ways of looking at this thing."

One is for the city to "take the land" and the other is to "provide enough incentives" to build what the city wants, Hubbard said.

Those can be, Hubbard said, "incentives other than economic...but economics usually is what motivates private enterprise."

R-4

THE DISCUSSION ended what had been an overview of R-4 zoning questions by planning staff for the commissioners, designed to eliminate some alternatives and bring others into focus. Another study session is scheduled for 3 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 19.

The R-4 zone incorporates most of Junipero Avenue from halfway between Fourth and Fifth avenues to Third Avenue and Mission and Torres streets. It had been targeted by the city as an area for multi-family housing stock.

It includes two large parcels for potential development: Tom Handley's Hayward Lumberyard, which is the entire block of Junipero Avenue on the east, Third and Fourth avenues as northern and southern boundaries respectively and Torres Street on the east; and Bob Murphy's lower lumberyard, the half block on Junipero Avenue starting at Fourth Avenue.

The area also incorporates a gas station, the Carmel Police Station, the city workyard, Chimneys Condominiums, Carmel Coin Wash, a dry cleaners and a paint store.

The area presents special problems since it borders the R-1 zone on Torres Street and the commercial district along Junipero Avenue and Mission Streets. It also has some excellent views of Point Lobos and the ocean, is a highly visible area and is the largest single area with potential for development in Carmel.

Staff asked the commissioners to give them direction on what type of specific plan to develop for the area.

Past commissions had proposed varying conditions, which included prohibitions on new condominiums, new commercial development and subzones with different setbacks, height, and development requirements to meet conditions in the different sections of R-4.

In principle, this commission agreed that the Torres Street side of R-4 should have special zoning conducive to the R-1 (single-family residential) and expressed concern over what density to zone the area. They have also been more in favor of commercial development in the area, particularly resident-serving businesses.

The commission also appeared to drop the idea of rezoning the entire area residential-commercial (RC) after Planning Director Diane White pointed out that would allow the development of hotels and motels in the area and the RC zoning ordinance would have to change to incorporate some businesses existing in R-4.

The commissioners had considered at previous meetings dropping the R-4 special zone and simply rezoning it RC.

Concern also had been expressed by some commissioners during past meetings and study sessions that the many different subzones developed by the previous commission were too convoluted and confusing.

Planners grapple with R-4 zoning revisions

Staff Planner Brian Roseth went through a list of items that the staff asked the commissioners to consider. From that list, the commissioners decided in principle to:

• Retain the R-4 boundaries and establish general regulations for the whole district, which would be divided into two subdistricts. The two districts would consist of the Torres Street residential side and a larger commercial/residential area around Junipero Avenue.

• Require a "coordinated" approach in the development of the two largest parcels, upper and lower lumberyards.

• Have special conditions along the Torres Street boundary where the residential district borders the upper lumberyard.

The commissioners agreed that a buffer zone, more conducive to the R-1 single-family homes across the street, should be considered for this "overlay district."

Possible items Roseth listed for the commissioners to consider along the Torres Street side were medium to minimum density housing, minimized traffic and building designs compatible with R-1.

• No decision was made about density, a problem that has generated much of the controversy around the R-4 district, but it did spark some comment from the commissioners.

As the R-4 review began, Roberts stated "for some reason, I have this horrible feeling of apartments springing up in the R-4 that will later be called the Carmel Projects."

The staff prepared a chart to demonstrate how many units would be allowed on different sized lots with different per-acre densities. The densities ranged from 11 units per acre to 66 units per acre.

On a 4,000 square foot lot, the 11 units would allow one home or apartment; 33 units per acre, three; and 66 units per acre, six.

A 5,000 square foot lot with a density of 11 units, one; at 33 units per acre, four; and at 66 units per acre, eight.

For the 20,000 square foot lower-lumberyard, a density of 11 units per acre allows five homes or apartments on the property; 33 units per acre would allow 15; and 66 units per acre would allow 30.

On the largest parcel, the 53,900 square foot upper lumberyard, a density of 11 units per acre would allow 14 units; 33 units per acre 41 apartments or homes; and with 66 units per acre, 82.

Comparable maximum densities in other cities include Pacific Grove, 20 to 30 units per acre; Seaside, 25; Salinas, 24.

Right now, Carmel allows 11 units per acre in the residential zone.

During the discussion, Commissioner Fred Keeble said that the density, 22 units per acre, recommended for R-4 by a consultant had made it "economically unfeasible" to develop the area. The previous commission had also been working on increasing the density because of that problem.

• Economics. As stated above, the question of economics came under some attack later by the commission. However, it was included in the list presented by Roseth as it had been a factor in prior discussions with Williams and Hubbard.

Some of the economic considerations listed were land uses that gave a monetary return to property owner, benefitted commercial activity and met market demand for such needs as housing stock.

• The commission also expressed an interest in maintaining the concept of commercial on the first floor and residential on the second, encouraging the gas station to continue in business and prohibiting retail establishments.

The marketplace, Dahlstrand said, would probably naturally keep retail businesses out of the district because of its location in town.

• Parking. Williams had made a suggestion that the R-4 might be a good site for some parking and sufficient parking for developments in the area has become a factor. Prior discussions included underground facilities or parking pads.

• Views. The commission discussed insuring views of Point Lobos and the ocean be maintained. Most commissioners agreed that maintaining private views was not in their legal concern, but they would give some conderation to the establishing public views in the area.

Chairman White has stated he feels the area is an important entryway into the community and a solid wall of buildings would be uncharacteristic of Carmel.

Views could be established through public

Planners set workshop on R-4 zone, in-lieu parking fees

THE CARMEL Planning Commission has scheduled a workshop on zoning in the R-4 district and review a request to refund in-lieu parking fees at 3 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 19 in the Carmel City Council Chambers.

The commission is currently developing a specific plan for the R-4 district located on Junipero Avenue between Third and Fourth avenues (See related story this issue.)

The commission will also consider businessman Roxy Rapp and Carmel architect George Brook-Kothlow's request to refund approximately $61,000 in in-lieu parking fees they paid under the master use permit ordinance.

Rapp and Brook-Kothlow hold the master lease on the former Sprouse-Rietz Variety Store's Ocean Avenue location, which they converted into two commercial spaces now occupied by Books, Inc. and The Nature Company.

A provision of the master use permit states when any remodeling increases the number of commercial spaces, adequate parking for the building must be reviewed. If one parking space per every 1,000 square feet cannot be provided on- or off-site, the applicant must pay in-lieu parking fees of approximately $21,000 per space.

When the 6,000 square foot Sprouse-Rietz space was remodeled last year the former planning commission and city council, on appeal, determined that Rapp and Brook-Kothlow had to pay for six spaces.

That decision was appealed again to the new planning commission and city council, which remanded it back to the planning commission. The appeal was based on "new information" contained in the Denise Duffy report on parking and general plan committee recommendations.

The Duffy report states that there is a 300 to 600 parking space deficiency in Carmel and that usually people come to town to shop in more than one store. The report adds that the requirement should be two parking spaces per 1,000 square feet, twice as much as currently required.

Since the report indicates that parking needs are generated by existing development, the staff finds that two spaces per 1,000 square feet puts an unfair burden on new development to pay for parking also used by current businesses.

To alleviate that problem, staff will recommend to the planning commision that review under the master use permit of remodels on existing buildings require parking or in-lieu fees for one parking space per each new commercial location rather than one per 1,000 square feet.

The planning commission cannot refund money, but will make a recommendation on the refund to the city council.

The general plan committee and planning commission have recommeded investigating a parking assessment district to replace the current in-lieu fee system.

A portion of the appeal filed by attorneys Carl Zerbe and Joe Franklin states that the in-lieu fees based on the master use permit is inequitable and that it has not applied equally in all cases that have come under the permit process.

Bennett property a knotty problem for planners parks on sensitive corners or small areas and the density taken from there could be transferred to other sections.

• Other items the commission will consider are public and private walkways and right of ways through the development and facilities for children and senior citizens.

Williams and Hubbard both stated that they had received the staff report just two days before and needed more time to review the comments. They said they plan to make more comment at the next meeting.

The Bennett Property

THE LOUISE Bennett property, represented by attorney George Brehmer, though not as large as the R-4, posed some unique problems for the commissioners.

The commission added conditions to Brehmer's plan for 11 lots, that would require "building footprints" sensitive to the trees as part of the specific plan and two entrances into the development. Another study session on the development is scheduled for Dec. 10.

The approximately 56,000 square foot undeveloped parcel, located between Dolores and San Carlos streets and bounded on the south end by Third Avenue, is a natural drainage site, containing lots on steep slopes and at least 57 "significant trees" identified by City Forester Gary Kelly. The property has approximately 160 trees in total, reported Planning Director Diane White at the meeting.

A staff report on the water course describes it as "a part of a major drainage system that begins in Carmel Woods and extends to Carmel Beach." It empties from the Bennett property under the Lincoln Street pedestrian bridge.

The site is probably most commonly observed by Carmel residents while driving north to the end of the commercial district on San Carlos Street where it curves into Camino Del Monte. The Bennett property is the steeply-sloped heavily-treed section behind Dolores Lodge and Hofsas House motels at the junction of San Carlos Street and Camino Del Monte.

Brehmer has submitted plans proposed by Bestor Engineers which divides the property into 11 building sites. The average lot size of 5,000 square feet, according to Brehmer, is in keeping with the neighborhood average size of 4,500 square feet.

Some of the lots would have to be dirt-filled and cut into the hill. A single "driveway" from Dolores Street, according to the plan, would provide access to the homes and an alleyway access in to the garages.

Bestor Engineers' plan also suggests a rock-lined channel or pipe to divert the water.

The plan was reviewed and recommended by the commission's planning and conservation committee consisting of commissioners Olof Dahlstrand and Bill Brown.

Another plan, developed in 1985 by local architect Ray Parks and City Engineer Clayton Neill, called for five lots which left the upper slopes undeveloped.

NEIGBORS OF the property appeared at the meeting to protest the impact of an 11-lot density and express concern about flooding in the ravine.

Louis Uribe told the commissioners he found it "very distressing that the initial plan was for five lots and now it is being increased to 11. That's a lot of very beautiful trees to cut to accomodate building."

He added, "It is an area where you find all kinds of animals at night" and when it is developed, "they're going to be gone."

Another neighbor, Bob Forlizzo, said he recognized that the property would "ultimately be developed," but also disapproved of the new density.

"That's a natural drainage site and an awful lot of rain goes through that ravine," Folizzo said.

Forlizzo echoed Uribe's feelings about the animals that visit the area.

"The area has many things that make Carmel 'Carmel' here. I have problem with the deer eating my flowers, but I would rather they eat my flowers than to not have them there at all."

All the neighbors that spoke stated a concern with addtional traffic the development would generate and said that their lower neighbors had experienced flooding during heavy rains.

However, one speaker, Mildred Kline, said she felt a well-designed and constructed building was safer for children than open space.

The commissioners discussed:

• Density. Dahlstrand, Keeble and Hicks all expressed their approval of the 11-lot plan.

"I like an 11-lot division rather than the five," Dahlstrand said. "It is more appropriate (for the neighborhood.) Five lots would lead to larger houses and I see this subdivision as a nice workable one. The homes are not so large that their not going to be marketable and I really don't see any traffic problem here."

Dahlstrand also suggested that an additional northern entrance into the subdivision be investigated.

The commission agreed and voted to add a San Carlos exit to the specific plan.

• Trees. All the commissioners expressed an interest in maintaining as many trees as possible on the property. One suggestion approved by the commission called for "building footprints" — or outlines for homes designed on each lot to avoid the trees — to be added to the plans, though Brehmer objected to that idea.

Both Brehmer and Hooper explained that the 11-lot lines were drawn to reduce the number of trees that would have to be cut.

They had, Brehmer added, identified the ones that were mature and past their prime.

It was after Roberts objected to portions of the forestry report submitted by Hooper and Bestor Engineers that the condition to add "building footprints" was added.

"My whole problem is with the identified trees. It would lead you to believe that 99 percent of the trees in Carmel have reached maturity and are ready to be cut down. If we approve an 11-lot plan, the architect must be sensitive to the trees."

"A lot of 'insignificant trees' have to come down to build here," he added.

• Drainage. City engineer Clayton Neill, at the request of commissioner Brown, told the commission that "from an engineer's point of view," the plan to put a rock-lined channel or pipe in as proposed by Bestor Engineers would work, but that it was a matter of aesthetics. There are two concepts to drainage sites, he explained, and this one was to "tuck it underground and get it out of sight."

Diane White said the other concept was an "emerging feeling in the field of engineering to maintain things in a more natural system. Staff felt this was a big opportunity the city should take advantage of with the idea of maintaining the stream in its natural state."

Dahlstrand, in response, said "I'd like to see it in its natural state, but then city should buy it as park land. This came up in the general plan discussions (Dahlstrand is on the general plan committee).

"If we want to preserve a natural water course the way it is, the burden shouldn't be on the property owner but on the community which is going to enjoy it."

Chairman Ken White, however, objected to building on two of the lots over the drainage area.

"It seems to me where people build in drainage areas, there is always a problem. I don't support those two lots being developed," he said.

Dahlstrand suggested putting another exit on the northern section of the property to allow access for at least two of the lots from San Carlos Street rather than having only one ingress and egress from the subdivision. The rest of the commission concurred with that idea and it was added to the specific plan for development.

A bird's eye view of SF 49ers from press box

By DAVID LELAND

IT'S REALLY the only place to watch a football game for a complete picture. The press box at Candlestick Park stands high above the field on the 50-yard line, an occasional, misguided bird flies by peering into the tinted window, getting a good look at the more than 100 journalists covering the game.

In a departure from its usual coverage, the Carmel Pine Cone decided to take a trip to San Francisco to check out first hand the atmosphere surrounding the 49er-St. Louis Cardinal game. And also, the triumphant return of quarterback Joe Montana from back surgery eight weeks earlier.

Before observances from the press box, however, one thing must first be understood: television provides a warped view of the dimensions surrounding a football stadium.

Despite what television shows, the field is the smallest part of the activity — it's only 100 yards long, not even the size of a city block. The concrete walls of the stadium slope gently upward and the orange chairs merge into different colors as the more than 59,000 people find their seats. And the players, now they're big.

They're not all huge, mind you, some are barely 6-feet tall. But then there are others who are gigantic, measuring 6-feet-6-inches in height and weighing close to 300 pounds — these are the defensive linemen.

Defensive linemen are the pit bulls of pro football. When they march single file onto the field they are unsmiling, ferocious and sullen. Football is not fun to these men; it is hard work.

The flip side of the coin is the offensive team. These guys seem to be having fun, they laugh, talk to the other team and generally are full of horseplay. Football to them represents boyhood dreams — the roar of the crowd is music to their ears.

BUT AS the game began, the press box became my home for the next three hours. Actually, I have never had as much food in my home in an entire year as there was in the press box, provided free by the 49ers.

It would appear the press corps is a hungry bunch. Hero sandwiches, potato salad, fried chicken, fruit, cheescake and drinks were only part of the fare provided for the writers to nosh on as the game progressed.

Besides a meal fit for a king, the view from the press box encompassed the whole playing field.

On television one is lead to believe that there is absolutely no action except where the ball is being carried or thrown. This is not true. From my vantage point I was able to view mini games between players.

One such contest pitted 49er tight end Russ Francis against a defensive back for the Cardinals. Time after time Francis and the defender wrestled each other, pulling jerseys and tossing each other to the turf, with the ball nowhere in sight. This lasted the entire game, with Francis finally drawing a penalty for unsportsman-like conduct. He caught only one pass, and that was thrown by wide receiver Jerry Rice.

Another benefit of the press box is the great care the 49ers take to make the newspaperman's job easier. Take, for instance, the third touchdown pass that Jerry Rice caught. Not five minutes later a 49er media representative announced that this was Rice's 12th touchdown pass of the year, a record held by several other players in 49er history — the most recent being Gene Washington.

Now I don't know about you, but I've always wondered how sportswriters find out all of these gems. The answer lies in the fact that they are handed them on a silver platter. Throughout the afternoon different pertinent tidbits of information were given freely to the press.

Also, after each quarter a piece of paper was given to each person with all of that quarter's statistics on it. Included was the type of play ran and who executed it.

And television. While the game was being broadcast by CBS around the country, there

Spanish students get firsthand view of Carmel

By DAVID LELAND

STICKING TO a whirlwind schedule that only a seventh-grader could handle, 11 Spanish students from Barcelona whistle-stopped into Carmel last week to begin a two-week stay.

The tour will wind up next Monday as the students board a British Airways flight back to Spain and the American School in Barcelona.

But in between those two weeks the youngsters will probably see more of the peninsula than most residents see in a year. Plus, the 12- and 13-year-olds will also attend classes at Carmel Middle School with their American counterparts.

The exchange program, which sent 25 Carmel sixth-graders to Spain in April (their visit was cut short by a series of terrorist attacks in Europe) currently allows two-week exchange visits, but this may change next year.

At the Oct. 23 school board meeting, Bob Infelise, superintendent of schools, said that the tentative plan is for junior and senior high school students to spend an entire semester in a foreign country, as soon as the details can be arranged.

While in Carmel, the exchange students from Barcelona met Mayor Clint Eastwood; toured the Carmel Mission Basilica and downtown Carmel; will attend a dance at Middle School; tour the Monterey Bay Aquarium and Cannery Row; take a field trip to Point Lobos and attend a farewell barbecue. Remember, this is in addition to attending regular classes.

For the children visiting Carmel, all of whom live in the metropolis of Barcelona, one of the primary differences they noted was the American architecture.

"I like the big houses," Jose Domingo, 12, said. "We live in the city so it is very different." Domingo said it is mostly apartment buildings where he lives.

A fellow student agreed.

"It's pretty different from Spain," Sonia Rodriquez, 13, said. "Spain has apartments and not as many trees."

While the female students had a hard time describing what appealed most to them about their visit to America, their male counterparts did not hesitate for a minute.

"I like football," Edmond Vidal said.

Life from the press box: Bird's eye view of 49ers

was also a feed to the press box — without commercials. During what would have been a commercial break, the station ran a picture of the picturesque skyline of downtown San Francisco from a hand-held camera on top of the stadium.

For the most part the writers are like any other spectator watching the game. There is really not much to write about until the end of the contest nears. So up until the third quarter the press room is alive with boisterous comments. But after it becomes somewhat apparent what the outcome will be, the portable Radio Shack computers appear on the desks and work begins.

These computers are a must for this type of event. The writer merely writes his story, picks up the telephone and, through a modem, sends the story to his paper.

ABOUT FOUR minutes before the end of the game reporters ride the elevator down to the field level and make their way towards the locker room.

TO GET to the locker room one must make their way across the playing field, which is an experience in itself. Looking up into the crowd it is easy to see part of the appeal which professional athletes feel drawn to in their play. The crowd noise is deafening, but more than that is the sheer energy put out by such a large crowd that puts the adrenaline glands to work.

Once in the media room, which is really the San Francisco Giants' dressing room, the cameras and questions roll as Head Coach Bill Walsh and Montana answer questions on the day's game.

No, Montana said, he did not worry about getting hit while he was passing.

This seemed strange to me, as he had had major surgery on his spine only eight weeks earlier. It was doubtful at that time whether he would ever play again. But no, he said, he hadn't really thought about that. He was more concerned, he said, with throwing good passes. He said during warmup his throws were wobbly, but improved when the game began. First things first.

Somehow, looking at Joe Montana sans his shoulder pads and flak jacket (he didn't use a back brace as advised by his doctor because it didn't feel right), I would think he should be somewhat concerned about even playing touch football with his build. A big guy he's not.

But he smiled and shrugged through question after question, probably unaware that part of the San Francisco population uses him as an alter ego.

The actual locker room is something to be avoided at any cost. It is like the site of battle the day after the fighting is done.

Rolls and rolls of tape and gauze cover the floor as naked and half-naked men are interviewd by both men and women reporters. It is also strangely quiet. Football is a business.

Jerry Rice, one of the day's stars, sits in front of his locker surrounded by three media types. His young face shows an expression of fatigue. He has worked hard and wants to go home.

After all, it's only a game.

News notes:

Comments sought on Del Monte land plan

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors will be considering several amendments to the Del Monte Forest Area Coastal Land Use Plan at its Dec. 16 meeting and is now accepting written comments regarding the proposed changes.

The primary change in the land use plan concerns Holman Highway with regard to the Spanish Bay project.

In receiving its use permit for building the deluxe hotel-golf course complex in Spanish Bay, the Pebble Beach Co. agreed to build an additional access to the project at Haul Road and Highway 68 near Pacific Grove.

The completion of the Spanish Bay project is expected to load an additional 100 car trips each day on Highway 68, according to Pebble Beach Co. representative Candy Ingram.

Now, in order get a more accurate appraisal of the actual impact of traffic coming and going from the resort, the county is suggesting that the additional entrance be delayed to "within three years after occupancy of the Spanish Bay Hotel."

Information regarding the proposed amendment and letters offering comments may be addressed to:

Monterey County Planning Department
Raymond W. Lamb
Assistant Planning Director
P.O. Box 1208
Salinas, CA 93902

All comments must be received by the county prior to Nov. 25 for the planning commission hearing on Nov. 26 and Dec. 15 for the board of supervisors meeting on Dec. 16.

Veterans commission to be established in Monterey County

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman has invited qualified applicants residing in the Fifth District to apply for appointment to a new Commission on Veterans Services about to be established by Monterey County.

To be qualified, applicants must be a veteran, widow of a veteran, spouse of a veteran or the surviving child of a veteran killed or missing in action.

"This Commission will act as a liaison between our community's veterans and the county to insure open communication and problem solving," said Strasser Kauffman.

Interested applicants are asked to write a letter to Strasser Kauffman at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, stating their interest and qualifications. Those who appear to be most qualified will be invited for a personal interview with Strasser Kauffman before a final appointment is made.

The Fifth District includes the Aguajito, Skyline Forest, parts of Monterey and Pebble Beach, Carmel, Carmel Valley, Big Sur and the Toro areas of Monterey County.

Forest service district invites comment

THE PEBBLE Beach Community Services District will conduct a study session to develop information and exchange ideas and viewpoints about the role of the PBCSD in serving the residents of Del Monte Forest.

The meeting is scheduled for 9:30 a.m., Friday, Nov. 14 in the community services district board room at Forest Lake and Lopez roads.

As the meeting is a study session, no action will be taken, but the services district hopes the discussions will contribute to a continuing process that assists in further definition of PBCSD public serve priorities with Del Monte Forest.

Youths hope garden party will help youth center blossom

By DAVID LELAND

WHAT A nice idea, a garden party to unveil the plans and hopes for the Carmel Youth Center. The invitation, sent to all Carmel residents, invites all to watch the youth center "grow and blossom."

The party will be held from noon to 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16, at the Carmel Youth Center, located at Fourth Avenue and Torres Street.

Three architects have donated time and energy to prepare plans for the redesign of the youth center, which will undergo a partial facelift. Their plans and models will be on display at the garden party.

For the inside renovation of the youth center Russ Haisley has been working on a plan to redesign the kithen, restaurant and the booth area, which overlooks Pt. Lobos.

Funding for the interior of the youth center is coming from a grant from the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation, which several months ago donated $50,000 for capital improvements.

The foundation distributes money earned from the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am Golf Tournament to various charities.

It should be noted that Mayor Clint Eastwood is on the board of directors of the golf foundation and has taken the youth center under his wing.

To demonstrate further his dedication to the youth center, Eastwood has taken up the task of providing a weight room and exercise area for the youngsters, with funding coming out of his own pocket. The weight room area design is being donated by architect Alan Williams.

Recently, 70 volunteer youths spent a Sunday afternoon hauling rubbish out of the storage area which will soon become the weight room. Sliding doors have already been installed to facilitate an indoor-outdoor exercise area.

The weight room will also serve community firemen and police, who will have access to the area.

For the backyard of the youth center, architect Richard Murray has come up with a design that includes a spa area.

The hard way to give blood

CARMEL HIGH School principal Marie Ishida got more than she bargained for at the Dracula Day blood drive held at the high school last week when she encountered a thirsty Dracula (actually Justin Conneau) while waiting. The blood drive managed to scare up 62 pints of blood ("We had a very good day," said Phil Gray of Carmel Red Cross), 60 from students, one from Ishida and one from librarian Nellie Ryder. OLD MISSION RANCH TO BE CONVERTED TO SPORT CLUB

Carmelites who have long dreamed of a community sports and social center in the vicinity of the river lagoon are about to see that vision become concrete. At the old Mission Ranch, just a step from the southern limits of Carmel, Mr. and Mrs. Willis J. Walker are bringing to completion an extensive program by which the historic rancho is being converted into an informal country club which will provide the facilities for swimming, tennis and many other sports which have been lacking on this side of the peninsula. Associated with the Walkers in this venture is Lloyd Tevis, and the opportunity to join the club will soon be offered, it was reported here this week.

SMALL FIRMS IN CARMEL THRIVE, COUNCIL LEARNS

Carmel is still a city where small businesses grossing $20,000 or less per year exceed in number all other firms in 16 categories, the city council learned last night in an analysis of gross sales and business license revenue prepared by City Clerk-Comptroller Larry Rose.

Second in point of numbers are businesses grossing $30,000 or less a year. In third place are firms grossing $5,000 or less annually and in fifth place are those with a gross yearly income of $10,000 or less.

CROWDED CLASSROOMS

In a recent school board study session the problem of class sizes at Carmel High School was discussed. Though average class sizes are not high, over 70 classes, many in science and mathematics, have more than 30 students enrolled.

With diminishing enrollments from first to second semester and decrease in overall enrollments predicted for future chances are that any solution need only be temporary.

A variety of potential solutions were presented at the study session some of which would cost money and all of which would create scheduling problems. With several alternatives available, we feel confident that a viable solution can be devised. Our students should not be hampered in their pursuit of knowledge.

NO GOVERNMENT FLOOD CONTROL FUNDS AVAILABLE

There are no government funds available to assist property owners on the Carmel River in protection of the river banks against erosion.

Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District assistant engineer Robert Binder gave the bad news to property owners who had requested public aid to maintain the river.

And the political prospects for creation of a Monterey Peninsula-wide assessment district to finance needed work on the Carmel River appear very dim, Binder said.

Computers becoming 'Apple' of teachers' eyes

By DAVID LELAND

WHILE READIN', writin' and 'rithmetic are still the primary educational goals at Carmel River School, some traditional methods of teaching are being replaced by computer terminals, which are truly the Apple of the teachers' eyes.

For the 440 youngsters at River School, which serves kindergarten through fifth-grade, Apple II computers in the classrooms are making learning a more pleasurable experience.

"They (the students) look forward to using the computers," said Kathy Eyerman, fifth-grade teacher, who said her students spend about 10 minutes each day on one of the two terminals in her classroom. "They get upset when they are denied the time. It's (the computer) an asset to the classroom."

Until recently the fifth-graders were the only recipients of computer technology in River School, but with the help of state grants and private donations there are now 10 computers to help educate the youngsters.

While currently the computers are aiding the teachers in their lesson plans, the goal for next year, which was discussed at the October school board meeting, is to develop a separate curriculum for computers.

One possibility for this application would be the increased use of word processing in the classroom to help students learn to edit their prose and understand better how to improve their writing.

ONE OF the most important uses of computers at River School is in the special education department. Here, youngsters who are having trouble in a particular area of learning, receive tutoring with the help of intensive software programs.

One of two instructors in this department is Roberta Benda, resource specialist, who deals with the academic problems of children.

Benda describes her 50 students as having a "gap between intelligence and achievement — more than just a learning problem."

One method Benda uses to facilitate the students' capabilities is the program Magic Spell, this is used an aid to alleviate spelling problems. Words are flashed across the screen from one to nine seconds at a time (the teacher determines the length). Benda, who pulls these from the students spelling list or other problem areas, programs them into the computer.

The student, after seeing the word on the screen, must spell it back correctly, before the computer will go on to the next selection.

"It's effective, Benda said. "It's (also) a break away from teacher contact."

Benda said many times the students, because of the small groups or individual study in her class, can become "teacher dependent," which means they rely too heavily on Benda for support and the answers to problems.

Students in Benda's class spend 30 minutes daily on each problem subject, which number math, reading, handwriting and perceptual motor coordination. The average stay, according to Benda, is one hour daily.

Rounding out the special education program at River School is Barbara Weingarten, speech and language clinician, the computers help her in her work with children having a special problem with language.

Her computer comes equipped with a black, three-inch speaker. When she inserts the program TextTalker the computer responds in English in a voice like Darth Vader, of Star Wars.

To demonstrate this Lauren Carlson and Kathryn Holden, kindergartners, took turns making the fierce-looking robot on the screen repeat back the words they typed into the terminal.

"This helps them generate speech themselves," Weingarten said.

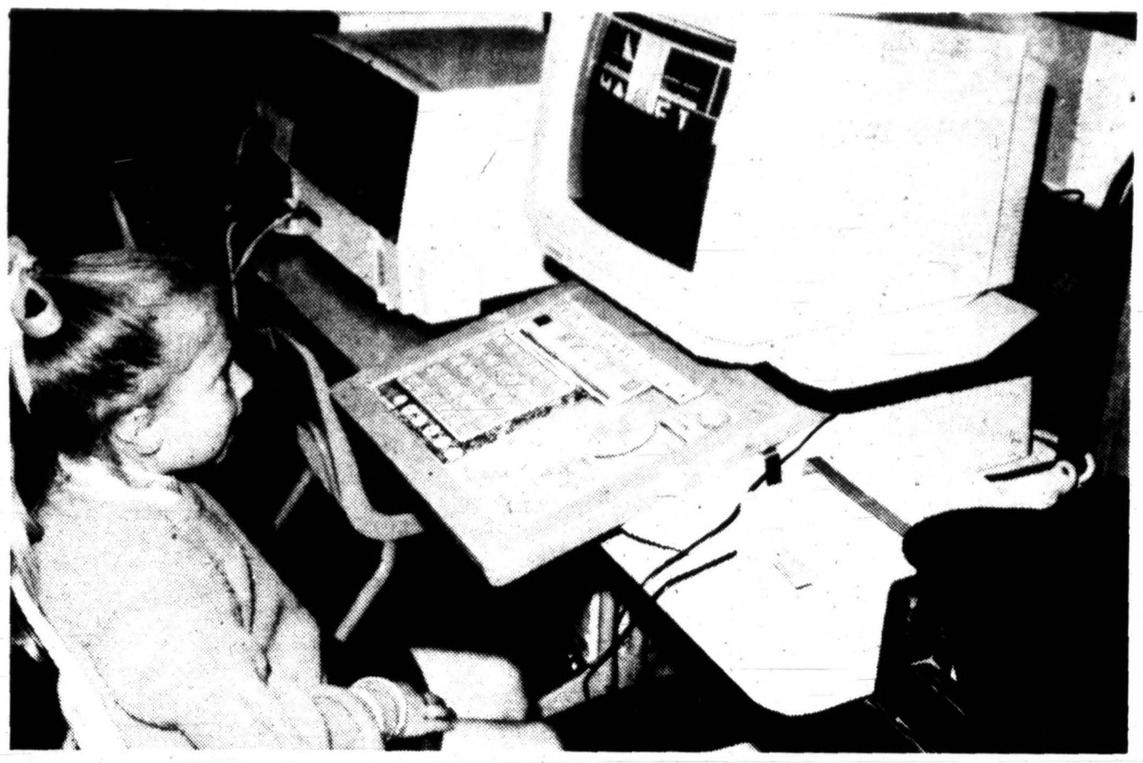
The software is designed to repeat back as many words as typed in at one time, although it will not store them into memory.

The computers not only help the child learn, but also are fun and facilitate communication and camaraderie between the co-users of the terminal.

"Computers are a great interaction device," Weingarten said. "Problem solving on the computer is an aid to interaction."

Working on the computer in pairs also seems to put more responsibility on the student and less on the teacher, which makes the students feel less threatened.

"The computers are non-judgmental. They (the students) don't feel criticized," Weingarten said. "It gives them an opportunity to develop problem solving and thinking skills."



FOR ASHLEY Gendelman, kindergartener, working on a computer at Carmel River School is a cross between watching a cartoon and learning to recognize symbols. The special touch pad allows her to stimulate the terminal merely by touching its surface. (David Leland photo.)

BUT THE use of computers is also benefiting the children in the mainstream classroom. In kindergarten the children work on a computer with a touch-pad keyboard instead of the traditional typewriter style.

The colorful touch pad is adorned with a picture of a ruler, numbers, colors, letters and directions north, south, east and west.

By using the computer the child begins to see a connection between the symbols on the touch pad and the characters on the screen.

For third- and fourth-grade students at River School math is the primary thrust of their computer work, thanks to a $8,000 state grant to buy software for the computers.

The fifth-grade youngsters use a more sophisticated new program called Shifty Sam. With this program, which helps with spelling, the student competes with the computer and bets whether they can spell 10 words from whatever word "Shifty Sam" calls up on the screen.

The student is alloted 100 seconds to accomplish this task.

For Jamie Genone, the challenge to make 10 words out of "teacher" was not a breeze, but he accomplished it with three seconds to spare. Producing such words as chat, reach and cheat, along the way.

It is good old-fashioned competition, which begins as the computer flashes "OK hot shot, make your bet," which spurs the students on.

"I just want to win my money back," said Genone, as he spelled furiously.

Another program the fifth-grade class uses is called Crossword Magic. With this software, the student writes words into the computer, which makes a crossword puzzle out of them.

After the puzzle is made, the student must write the hints in a separate column. Then, a printout is made and the puzzle given to another student who attempts to work it. Sometimes even relatives of the student have trouble working the puzzles.

"I sent one to my grandmother and stumped her," Joe Sheedy said.

PADRE PRATTLE

Foreign intrigue

ONE OF the most intriguing programs at Carmel High School is the Foreign Exchange program. This year there are 10 exchange students walking the halls of the CHS. Each student has his own unique personality which gives the American students a taste of what it's like to live in a foreign land. It seems very frightening to leave home and enter into a totally different way of life. What is going on inside the minds of these newcomers?

Michelle Ladner, from Olten, Switzerland, noticed the difference in American television. "The commercials here are so funny!" she observed. "I can't stand it when the movies I'm watching are interrupted right at the tense moment by a commercial. At home the movies run straight through."

Another Swiss girl, Lara DeZuzio, from the city of Bienne, commented about the different classroom structure at her school. Lara remarked, "In Switzerland the teachers change from room to room and the same students stay together all day. I'm getting lost trying to remember all these rooms!"

Foreign students have to adjust to new classroom structures when attending Carmel High: 'In Switzerland the teachers change from room to room and the same students stay together all day. I'm getting lost trying to remember all these rooms!'

Lara DeZuzio
CHS exchange student

Eva Suarez, from Barcelona, Spain, was surprised by the way Americans constantly take off their shoes in public. "In Spain it is considered impolite to run around barefoot," she said. "It seems strange to me."

From exotic Rio de Janeiro comes Joanna Fernandez. In her native land, she explains, the beach is an important social gathering place. "You can always be certain to see someone you know at the beach. Everyone goes to the beach after school. That's not the case in Carmel because it's too cold."

Carmel acquired an excellent addition to their golf team with Yohan Danielsson, from Ahus, Sweden. He says that he misses the better radio stations in Sweden, but the ones in California will do for now.

It is not often that Carmel sees exchange students from Indonesia, but this year CHS is hosting Iwan Tantu (pronounced "E-1") from the town of Ujung Pandang. Iwan's big meal in Indonesia is lunch, and he admits to having had a hard time adjusting his stomach to our unfamiliar meal system at first, but now he manages quite well.

MOST FOREIGN students will return home after this school year is finished, but Fabienne Prossmans, from Liege, Belgium, moved to American permanently with her mother. Why the big move? "My mom and I decided that we needed a change, and we always wanted to learn English."

Kirstin Roedlind, from Hornslet, Denmark, says that the parents in her town don't have as much influence on their children's freedom. "There is not such a big hangup with maturity and the coming of age concept, Kirstin said. "The kids are given more responsibility at an earlier age — there is no such thing as restriction."

Andi Muller from Bamberg, Germany discusses the political difference between the people in Germany and America. "It seems the Americans are lackadaisical in their attitude towards their right to vote. They don't realize the importance of getting involved in their own government."

From the metropolis of Tokyo, Japan comes Yuko Miyazawa. She plays a mean trombone and also admits to having a secret passion for tacos. What strikes her as an American oddity is the fact that couples kiss each other during school. "This is heavily looked down upon in my school!"

It is always easy to decipher the exchange students from the masses because they are the ones who are very gentle and attentive in class. They also wear stylish clothing which unfortunately can't be purchased in America. Another dead giveaway is their beautiful accents. The ease with which they speak in their native tongue impresses all who have tried to emulate the same fluidity in their foreign language classes in Carmel.

These young voyagers are going through one of the best educational experiences they will ever have. At an early age they realize the need for world communication and they are doing something about it by visiting and sharing a part of their lives with others. Just by their presence they are taking the first step in bringing the world closer together.

CARMEL YOUTH CENTER

By Jeff Bell

New in November

IT'S HARD to imagine that so many new things can happen in the fall, but when you're young anything from outer space to our space is brand new.

This Sunday, Nov. 16 at noon there will be a "Garden Party" for all friends — past and present — of the Carmel Youth Center. There will be free punch and popcorn, and delectables from our world-famous snack bar will be available at a moderate cost. Arrows will guide you through the youth center while our Carmel Youth Council paves new ground.

Speaking of turf, tomorrow is PG rally day because Saturday is the Pacific Grove/Carmel High grudge match. Many divots will be flung far and wide. The mighty Padres are bound to rock and roll all over those Breakers. After the victory over RLS last weekend I'm sure there will be no problem.

Raiderism is back at the youth center on Monday night, Nov. 17. A mystery Raider from the L.A. Raiders team will be here to watch the game. All I can really tell you is that he is famous for what he does. The game that night is San Francisco 49ers at Washington Redskins. Remember we have free popcorn, 75-cent hamburgers, 25-cent Cokes and other soft drinks at our snack bar.

New at the youth center is our "Baton Twirlers." Instructors Desiree Suhr and Tina Buffo will be teaching baton solo routines, streamers, and flags. The age group for the class is 11-16 and cost is only $10 per month. This class will represent the Carmel Youth Center in parades around the Monterey Peninsula.

Remember this month we are accepting registration for Okyso Ryu Jujitsu classes. This is a traditional Japanese martial art taught by Sensei Carl Quigg — call the youth center for dates and times for these classes at 624-3285 from 3 to 8 p.m.

Available every day at our world famous snack bar is the best hot dog on this planet! Trivia question of the week: How many Ringling Brothers were there originally?

RELIGIOUS VOLUNTEERS WORKSHOP TO BE HELD NOV. 20

To find out what approaches work to mobilize volunteers within the religious community, a workshop will be held 8:30 a.m. Thursday Nov. 20 in Monterey.

Mary Ann Lawson will be workshop leader for the affair to be held at the United Methodist Church. The workshop is open to anyone interested, but Lawson particularly hopes that lay leaders, pastors, priests and rabbis or their assistants attend.

The objectives will include discussion on volunteer burn-out: are the same people — in and out of the church community — doing the volunteering? as well ashow to get new people involved and what motivations lead people to be volunteers.

For further information call Volunteers in Action, 373-6177.

SYMPOSIUM DEALS WITH COASTAL WATER POLLUTION ISSUES

A first-of-its-kind coastwide gathering of scientists, pollution control officials and environmental activists will convene in Monterey Nov. 13-15 to find ways to keep California's bays and estuaries healthy and productive.

Organizers of the meeting, titled "Managing Inflows," include the nonprofit Bay Institute of San Francisco, the California Coastal Commission, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Monterey Bay Aquarium. All 13 sponsors of the symposium are concerned with how river flows, sewage discharges, agricultural drainage, oil and chemical spills, urban runoff, and tides, salt and silt combine to determine the health of coastal waters.

They are (left to right), Hank Krause, Yvonne Lawson, Peggy Noel, Pam Treves, Dolores Johnson, Bobbie Bollard, and Yvonne Saunders. Unique handmade items, baked goods, candy and antiques will be among the holiday items for sale.

"The symposium brings together an unusual mix of specialists — scientists, pollution law experts, regulatory agency administrators, economists and environmental leaders," said Peter Douglas, executive director of the California Coastal Commission. "The meeting is very solution-oriented. We are going to come away from Monterey with useful information for protecting California's remarkable coastal resources."

Forty-four speakers and panelists are scheduled to give technical papers or offer comments on public policy issues connected with pollution of California's bays and estuaries. The technical reports, Thursday, Nov. 13 and Friday, Nov. 14 in sessions at the Monterey Sheraton will address biology, hydrodynamics, chemistry and engineering subjects. The final day, from 8:30 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 15 in Steinbeck Forum, is designed more for the general public and will focus entirely on Monterey Bay. A special two-day session to help economists develop better methods for dealing with impacts on natural resources is scheduled for Friday and Saturday.

Registration for the symposium is $50 per person for all three days in advance or $60 at the door. Registration for Monterey Bay day only is $10 in advance or $15 at the door. For registration information, call the Bay Institute at (415) 331-2303, or AMBAG at 373-6116.

BUSINESS BEAT

By Nancy Hills

Cut and dried

SAL GRECO may have sold Carmel Cutting Room, but that doesn't mean he's out of business.

Greco is returning to the simple life, more or less. Though that isn't the way he describes it, going from a full hair salon to a barber shop does seem to be simpler to me.

Right now he is working with Les the Barber (his full name is Les Fulgham), on Sixth and Dolores, but on Nov. 20 Greco is getting a new address. He's purchasing Mickey's of Carmel, Mickey Smith's barbershop on the corner of Seventh and San Carlos, behind Vintage Realty. After working in Carmel since 1961, Smith is retiring to Paso Robles.

Greco plans to carry on the tradition of a full-line barber shop, with shaving, beard trimming, facials (which includes a shave and scalp treatment,) conditioning treatment and, of course, haircuts. He even specializes, he said, in the flat top, now the popular item among the younger crowd.

He will also do hair color, though he'll not be doing permanents or other things that you usually get in a hair salon.

For those who want a little extra, manicurist Paula Scott will offer "executive manicures" for men. For women, manicures can include artifical nails (gels, silk wraps and acrylic).

Barbering is not a recent addition to his repertoire, according to Greco. He is both a licensed barber and cosmetologist. A "master barber" for that matter, he said, which shouldn't scare women away. He also spent many years as a women's hairdresser.

In one of those "it's a small world" coincidences, before coming to Carmel in 1974 Greco said he worked in Hollywood for Jay Sebring's, with none other than...Les Fulgham. Greco probably can tell some pretty good Hollywood stories after working there for Universal Studios.

So what about Mickey Smith, who has been keeping the folk in Carmel neat and tidy for 25 years?

It's on to more time for himself in Paso Robles where he has bought a home, will build another amphibious airplane, make jewelry, and generally just enjoy himself.

"I have personally felt extremely fortunate," Smith said. "I have worked in the place I choose above all others and I've been able to be with friends all day."

Ironically, Smith is also an escapee from Hollywood. This seems to be the place to escape to.

REPUBLIC OF CLOTHES

When is Banana Republic in the Carmel Plaza opening? Boy, have I been asked that question a lot lately. But keep your shirts on, folks. Nov. 20 is the date so far, I'm told.

The new 2,700 square foot shop will be decorated in the "Hunting Lodge" motif, according to Joann Snyder, public relations coordinator. It's just one of the many interiors their 57 nationwide stores are done in. We could have gotten

SAL GRECO, barber and cosmetologist, and Paula Scott, manicurist, are setting up shop in Mickey's of Carmel on San Carlos and Seventh, currently owned by Mickey Smith. Smith is retiring and Greco will be the new owner as of Nov. 20. No new business name yet, but we'll let you know. (Nancy Hills photo.)

Make YOUR Smile a winner!

Bonding is not a new procedure. In this, the era of holistic health, physical fitness, and "be the best you can be" mentality, bonding has come of age.

Bonding is a relatively simple procedure. A composite resin or porcelain material is added directly to the roughened enamel surface of the tooth. Usually no anesthesia is required.

giraffes, you know. I have a soft spot for giraffes.

The 8-year-old company was purchased by The Gap in 1983, but Synder said the original founders, Mel and Patricia Ziegler, remain at the helm. Patricia Ziegler still designs the clothing, just as she did when the the company was founded.

In fact, Synder said, that's how the whole thing was started. Ziegler liked to wear casual, unusual styles from around the world. She took the basic designs of the world's military and traditional dress and adapted them into her own designs.

They also carry a small percentage of "surplus" gear and clothing, and while it's of the best quality, it's only about 5 percent of the merchandise, Synder said.

TAKE CARE!

Lock-up that cash box and hide those purses. The holiday season is upon us and Carmel Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras called to say we have a slick, light-fingered thief in town who goes into the back rooms of shops and steals whatever cash he or she can find. The police believe it's a male actually, but there is no description. Could be a tall, white man.

Poitras said to lock the back door to your shop, secure the employees' section and definitely do not leave cash lying around — that includes cash in purses. The biggest catch this person has garnered so far was a $3,000 loss for one store. The whole deposit.

And if you see anyone "remotely suspicious," call the Carmel police department at 624-6403. Of course, if it's an emergency — a crime in progress — call 911.

WELCOME BACK, PATRICE

There's good news and bad news.

The good news is, Patrice Larroque, formerly with The Lodge at Pebble Beach, is back as the general manager of the Pine Inn.

"I'm just thrilled to be back in the area," Larroque said, after "just playing" since April when he left The Lodge.

You now have a choice. A new auction gallery has opened up on the Monterey Peninsula! Auction Galleries Unlimited, at 571 Lighthouse Ave., in Monterey has opened its doors to be of service to you.

We at Auction Galleries Unlimited want to change the means by which you sell your precious possessions. We are a bonded and licensed auction company with a combined experience of over 40 years in the auction business.

MR. CRAIG LEE HEMPHILL was first introduced to the Peninsula as auctioneer and manager of the Auction Studio in 1972. Learning from the ground up, Craig gained valuable knowledge and experience in all phases of the auction business. His extensive background in economics and marketing enabled him to expand the scope of a small family auction business. Specifically, Craig expanded the research library; tripled the preferred customer mailing list; developed an inhouse advertising agency covering the media, developed new display techniques for better marketing of your antiques and collectables.

TOM JOHNSON, Manager of Auction Galleries Unlimited, offers 12 years of experience in the auction industry. Promotions from Warehouseman to Manager of the Friday Sale and then to Manager of the entire Saturday Sale demanded not only familiarity with antiques and art, but also experience in research, display, cataloguing of the sale, and customer relations. Tom's interest in and knowledge of art, particularly in limited edition prints, assures you an open and honest appraisal for your special item.

GEORGE STONE comes to Auction Galleries Unlimited with over 30 years in the auction business, as a Truck Service Moving specialist. George who will take special interest in the transportation of your valuables. He and his assistant will personally and professionally wrap and pack everything that you want to go to auction.

Auction Galleries Unlimited is a professional auction corporation dedicated to giving advice and assistance to individuals, executors, and trustees in the disposition of single items, collections, and estates.

Our services include the liquidation of estates — from the furnishings to the real estate. The same service applies to businesses, whether large or small. We also have on-site sales. Whether your needs are a "Tent Sale" complete with catering, or a "Price Tag Sale", Auction Galleries Unlimited has the complete auction plan for you.

Our newly remodeled gallery offers an elegant setting in which to display and auction your valuables. Auctions are held once a month and run 2 days in length.

HOW IT WORKS:
If you are selling, our sliding scale consignment rates keep interest high for both buyer and seller. The higher the hammer price, the lower the commission percentage! On a per item basis, the percentages are 25% for $100 and under; 20% for $101 to $500; 15% for $501 to $1500, and 10% for $1501 and above.

As a seller, your benefits include extensive advertising, insurance, truck service, storage, prompt payment, and more money returned to you. As an added service, Craig Hemphill, your auctioneer, will confer with you in the privacy of YOUR OWN HOME OR BUSINESS and give you a FREE written estimate of your valuables. Consignments are by appt. only. In this manner we can give you our individual attention. We at Auction Galleries Unlimited are ready and willing to be of service to you. KAZU's tasty affair

KAZU, THE non-profit community-supported radio station in Pacific Grove, held a fund-raiser last weekend at Highlands Inn. Billed as A Tasty Affair, chairperson Tracy Morrison was pleased that event was sold out long before the set date arrived.

And a tasty affair it was! With 22 wineries and two non-alcoholic beverage companies offering libations to accompany food by eight catering and specialty foods shops.

Although many guests stayed for dancing until after midnight (through the courtesy of Highlands Inn), the dance floor was packed shoulder to shoulder with over 500 wine and food samplers earlier.

"We will bring the whole world to the KAZU listeners here," said Rich Terry, station manager. "If we can gain access to British Broadcasting Co., the Canadian networks, and the Public Broadcasting Network."

With aid of a satellite hook-up the New York Metropolitan Opera — Live from Lincoln Center — will be piped in beginning Nov. 29 at 11 a.m. The satellite will open up a panorama of possibilities in programming for KAZU. The goal is to attain $150,000 needed to qualify for the Public Broadcasting Network.

In the past, among their popular broadcasts are Static In The Attic reruns which bring old-time radio comedy and suspense programs to present-day radio buffs on Tuesday evenings.

Maurie McGuire, president of KAZU board of directors, worked with Gabriela Knubis PR and Peter Komposh VP and general manager for Highlands Inn. Board members attending were Marsha Lubow, Thomas Dunworth, Tracy Morrison, Mac McDonald, Chris Stanely and Carol Weisman.

The 150 players were given $10 in free chips to start so the atmosphere was charged as the group moved into the Casino Room where croupiers were waiting at gaming tables. After perusing the many prizes available Pit Boss Steven Weathers nodded and the action began.

Dr. Anne Marangoni was general chair for the evening event and was assisted by Terry O'Neill, who did the decorations, Sharon Blaziek who was in charge of the dealers, Julie Hughett, who is Zonta treasurer, and Gloria Mercurio, V P.

A handcarved pine toy chest with a unicorn on it was the big raffle prize of the evening. The casino players won a variety of items, from salami to sculpture, from computers to piano lessons, to a harp concert.

Zonta president Jeanne Bryne said, "In the past this organization of executive women has committed money to Vanished Children's Alliance and Family Resource Center. This year, we are continuing with the missing/abused children problem by setting up a fund through Community Human Services project. This money will provide interim housing and counseling for runaways, who comprise a large percent of children missing each year."

CULTURAL EXCHANGE WITH DALLAS MUSEUM

Last week the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art entertained guests from the Dallas Museum of Art by taking them on a decorative arts tour through Pebble Beach, Carmel and Monterey. Dr. Stephen Nash, associate director of the Dallas Museum, and his wife, accompanied the group of 17 members of the Art League. They were shown the beauty of 17-Mile Drive prior to visits to two private homes.

Elsa Williams, internationally-known stitchery artist, instructor, lecturer and author, opened her Pebble Beach home in the morning to discuss the art of stitchery. Assisting with brunch in her home were Betty Chapman and Gail Compton.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

'Never be a sourpuss'

(from Dec. 18, 1981 Pine Cone)

Sarah Dale Manakee was born in West-by-God Virginia, and now she is living in Sandy Springs, Md. At the age of 84 she began a new career as an artist, painting in oil the things she knew and loved — rivers, oceans, flowers and hillsides.

She gives us this advice: "Stay busy, sleep well, eat well and don't be a sourpuss. The worst thing that can happen to you is not to have anything to do; no interests, you'll get old quickly then." She has just celebrated her 105th birthday.

The Pulse, the Community Hospital magazine, quotes an old Chinese proverb: "A bit of fragrance always clings to the hand that gives you roses." Oh Lord, help us to keep busy, never to be a sourpuss and to go on giving roses.

I quote this poem by Sam Walter Foss from memory and I think it's correct:

"Let me live in a house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by.
Men who are good and men who are bad
As good and as bad as I.
I shall not sit on the scorner's bench
Nor hurl the cynics ban
Let me live in a house by the side of the road
And be a friend of man."

Finally, when we forget ourselves, we do things that are remembered. A Danish proverb says, "No one is rich enough to do without a neighbor." Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The partial loss of some mental skills among elderly people may be due more to disuse than to disease, and such losses can be reversed with simple mental exercises, a new study by scientists at Pennsylvania State University indicates. About 40 percent of those whose inductive reasoning and spatial orientation skills had declined over a 15-year period were able to recoup those losses after only 5 one-hour training sessions.

Sherry Willis, one of the researchers involved in the study, offered advice to older people who feel as if their mental skills have been slipping, or that they are experiencing the early signs of Alzheimer's disease. She suggests crossword puzzles and word games to help improve inductive reasoning. Activities like woodworking and intricate needlework are excellent forms of mental exercise to help improve spatial orientation.

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

By Gunnar Norberg

Perpetuate the magic essence

HIGHLIGHTS OF last week's 70th anniversary celebration by the City of Carmel, were a Sunday morning breakfast at the Forest Theater and on the following afternoon, a panel discussion at Sunset Center. Both featured long-time Carmel residents who gathered to meet and to reminisce.

The day was sunny at the Forest Theater and the pancake-and-champagne breakfast opened memory lanes tapped by Tom Brown when he asked old-timers to come up to the microphone. Many of the anecdotes were humorous and the laughter was loud and frequent, and the applause enthusiastic.

Many of the speakers said how glad they were that they could have lived in so ideal a community as Carmel. Mayor Clint Eastwood said that he had had a chance to see a great deal of the world and he was sure Carmel was the best place of all, and that was why he had made it his home.

The Monday afternoon panel discussion at Sunset's Carpenter Hall, was sponsored by the Carmel Heritage Society. The panel members — Connie Palms, Virginia Stanton, Dr. James Hopper, F. Robert Smith, Charlotte Townsend, and Sam Colburn — were authentic old-timers, and their anecdotes were many and amusing and roundly applauded. And the moderatr, "Skip" Lloyd, a native Carmelite, was a deft host.

Like the speakers at the Forest Theater breakfast, both the panel members and the audience participants relished their recollections in this their best of all worlds but at the same time they acknowledged that Carmel was not now in that yesterday's world. Nevertheless it was still the best of all places to live. Virginia Stanton, president of the Carmel Heritage Society, put it this way:

"It was a great village. I'm just sorry it's not the same, but I still enjoy what we have here."

Implicit in this statement is the acknowledgment that yesterday's best of all worlds was not, in this different time, exactly yesterday's perfection.

This essentially is at the root of the acceptance of something less in the future than was commonly known and enjoyed in the past.

Twenty-three years ago, Francis Whitaker, who had labored long and hard in this city vineyard to see that the special and treasured essence of Carmel would continue into the future, said one day that there was no more use trying to save it, and so said good-bye and left Carmel.

Whitaker, an artist blacksmith, had been elected three times to the city council here, and had headed the Point Lobos League, an important environmental organization. His disillusionment was extreme, and his departure — and that of many other dedicated Carmelites — has made the task of saving this emerging Shangri-La more and more difficult. Yet I and many others have continued to believe that it is important, and indeed essential, to take an unshakable stand, for this enlightened Carmel-by-the-Sea can indeed become tomorrow's lasting Camelot if its true believers persist in their effort make it a bellweather for the future — the first identifiable human sanctuary in this greatly troubled world.

This may seem to some, indeed to many, an impossible dream, but it is time and past time, that mankind begins to create somewhere, specially protected human sanctuaries. And there is no other place better suited to be the first such sanctuary anywhere, then Carmel-by-the-Sea and its environs up the Carmel Valley and down the coast. Its climatic and scenic setting, its cultural achievements, and its perceptive people attracted to it from all over the country and from all over the world, fit it for that first human sanctuary role.

It was 15 years ago — in the March 4, 1971 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone — that I first presented in some detail the plan for such a sanctuary status for the Carmel area. It appeared in a special supplement in that Pine Cone issue, and the paper titled it The Norberg Plan for a Heritage City. (Since all the Pine Cone issues are preserved on microfilm at the Harrison Memorial Library, readers can go there to see for themselves just what I was proposing.)

During my first two terms on the Carmel City Council, I had tried to see whether any existing state law could be used to provide the kind of authority needed to provide Carmel with the special powers which would be required for the setting-up here of something like that sanctuary-city I had in mind, and I had found there was no existing state statute on such a subject.

There was, however, a provision in the state Constitution which I felt could be used. That provision I found in Section 6 of Article II which said that the state Legislature "...shall, by general laws, provide for the incorporation, organizatoin and classification...of cities and towns, which laws may be altered, amended or repealed..."

Since the Legislature had already created two kinds of cities, it could presumably create a third kind. This, it seemed to me, could be the sanctuary-city kind if the state Legislature at some point, would make up its mind to enact the necessary legislation. (The two existing kinds of cities are General Law Cities such as Carmel and Charter Cities of which Monterey is an example.)

During the past 15 years, my sanctuary-city proposal has been before various local government committees at one time or another or in the hands of individual legislators, but so far it has made no significant headway. Once, back in 1978, state Sen. Henry Mello, then a member of the Local Government Committee of the State Assembly, had a consultant to that commitee, John G. Tennyson, prepare a detailed commentary on my proposal. In his 40-age report, Tennyson said on page 1 that "Carmel is no doubt a unique and beautiful area, unlike any other in California," but then he said on page 38, "in conclusion, the Norberg proposal has conceptual merit...(but) the provisions of the proposal appear to raise constitutional questions..."

During my many years as a member of the Carmel City Council, I served on committees of the League of California Cities and I met mayors and councilmen up and down the state, who pointed out that the state Legislature could, of course put a proposal such as mine on some state-wide ballot as an amendment to the State Constitution and thus let the people decide upon the proposal.

A good many of those mayors and councilmen said the voters could then decide upon whether the legislation could apply specifically, at least in the first instance to sanctuary-city status for the Carmel related areas. Most of the mayors and councilmen who suggested this approach said that the using of the Carmel name in the amending legislation would certainly give it a better chance to win voter approval because there was high regard throughout the state for this area. And some of these mayors and councilmen said they would themselves speak to their respective state legislators about my proposal and to urge them to give it attention.

So far, as I have said, neither my own efforts nor the efforts of others on behalf of my sanctuary-city proposal, has brought it to a front-burner at any of the local government committees of the state Legislature. Mayor Eastwood has expressed interest in what's called my Heritage City proposal, and I hope that he and others will some day make it possible for the Carmel area to win that sanctuary-city status while there is still some chance to perpetuate the magic essence of the Carmel which all those old timers had in their separate ways so greatly valued.

BUSINESS BEAT

The bad news is that Chris McKay, who took over the management of the hotel as a consultant when it was purchased by Fresno developers Richard Gunner and George Andros in December, is leaving that position. He said he wants to do consulting work again. We'll miss him, that's for sure, if he doesn't stay in the area.

Larroque said plans continue to "upgrade" the hotel, but care will be taken not to lose the essence of the Pine Inn in the changes. Next week they will start remodeling some of the rooms and this week the reroofing should be finished.

WATER TENTS

The Carmel Business Association has been busy delivering tabletop "tent" signs to restaurants in an effort to help Carmel-by-the-Sea save water. Water is served only on request, and that's why there is none automatically provided at the table anymore.

"Our goal," explained CBA President Joan DeMers, "was to personally call on every restaurant in Carmel."

Board members have been distributing the signs and explaining to restaurant owners and managers that it isn't just serving water but washing all those additional glasses that uses the precious resource up. So bottled water isn't necessarily the answer.

"Excellent" was the word DeMers used to describe the response she received.

"I think it's a help to the employees. People will realize they don't have a lazy waiter, but that there is a water problem in Carmel," she pointed out.

MEMBERS OF Dance Reach from the University of California at Santa Cruz will perform at area high schools. Among the routines danced by the ensemble are "The Mall," here featuring Jennifer Kilfoilin.

University dance ensemble reaches out to high schools

DANCE REACH, a new performing ensemble created by the University of California Santa Cruz Dance Program and directed by faculty member Martha Curtis, will present lecture-performances at local high schools.

Funded in part by UCSC Friends of the Arts and UCSC Community Services, Dance Reach was created for the purpose of introducing modern dance as an art form to Santa Cruz and neighboring community schools, while giving UCSC students experience in performance, choreography and community outreach.

On Tuesday, Nov. 18, Dance Reach will perform at Monterey High School at 10:15 a.m. and at Seaside High School at 1:45 p.m.

On Thursday, Nov. 20, the ensemble will perform at Carmel High School at 10:15 a.m. A master class involving all three participating schools will be offered 3:15 to 4:45 p.m. in the Seaside High School gymnasium.

Ensemble members — UCSC students and faculty — visit the schools to present lecture/performances and workshops. The centerpiece of Dance Reach is a presentation which encourages the audience to look inside a dance to see how the choreographic process was employed to create the finished work.

Pro-Am ticket packages available

THE AT&T PEBBLE Beach National Pro-Am, which attracts both golf's leading winners and top celebrities, has been set for Jan. 26 to Feb. 1 1987 and advance tickets are now on sale.

Last year's inaugural tournament, played over the Pebble Beach Golf Links, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill, was won by Fuzzy Zoeller, who is expected to defend his title, according to tournament officials.

In addition to practice rounds, which begin Jan. 26, the actual tournament is preceded by the "3M Shoot-Off," a sidelight to the regular competition. In the "Shoot-Off," six touring professionals are invited to play five holes at Pebble Beach — the first, second, third, 17th and 18th.

One player is eliminated after each hole until there is a winner at the 18th.

The first three days of competition are played on all three courses, and the final round is played at Pebble Beach. Celebrities and amateur partners of the pros play all four days of the event, if they qualify for the final round.

A variety of ticket packages are being offered for advance purchase. They are:

- The grounds and grandstand badge, offered at $80 this year. In addition to season badge privileges, this badge entitles the holder to a grandstand seat at the 18th green at Pebble Beach. Grandstand seats are limited and will be allocated strictly on receipt of application.
- The season badge, $50 prior to Dec. 31.

Pianist solos with Bay Symphony chamber orchestra

DENIS DE COTEAU will guest-conduct the 44-member Monterey Bay Symphony Chamber Orchestra during concerts Sunday, Nov. 16 at Sunset Theater, Carmel, and Monday, Nov. 17 at Sherwood Hall, Salinas. Pianist Roy Bogas is the featured soloist both nights.

The repertoire will include Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 21 (Elvira Madigan), Weber's Oberon Overture, Boyce's Symphony No. 8, the Intermezzo from Kodaly's Hary Janos Suite, and the first movement of Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole, in which orchestra member Leah Bayes will play the solo violin part. Bayes, 15, is the winner this year of the competition for concertmaster of the all-state youth orchestra of the California Music Educators Association.

Born in New York City, Maestro de Coteau earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in music from New York University while performing professionally on the viola.

He went on to receive a doctor of musical arts degree from Stanford University and taught at Grinnell College in Iowa until 1969, when he returned to the San Francisco Bay area as professor of music and conductor of the university orchestra for California State University at Hayward, a position he still holds.

Maestro de Coteau's scholastic career is accompanied by his conducting for a variety of dance companies, youth orchestras and major symphonies throughout the world. These include the BBC Scottish Symphony, Chicago Lyric Opera Orchestra, New Orleans Philharmonic, New York Symphony of the New World, San Francisco Chamber Orchestra and the Glendale, New Mexico, Richmond, St. Louis, San Francisco, San Jose and Seattle symphonies.

He was named music director and conductor for the San Francisco Ballet Orchestra in 1974, after four years (1970-74) as assistant conductor. Since 1977 Maestro de Coteau has been music director and conductor for the Flagstaff (Arizona) Festival of the Arts.

In 1979 he was appointed conductor for the Deutsches Jungendorchester Rheinland-Pfalz for that orchestra's performances in Salzburg and Vienna.

Maestro de Coteau conducted the Oakland Symphony Youth Orchestra from 1970 to 1979. Under his direction, it became the first American youth orchestra to win bronze and silver medals at the Van Karajan International Competition in Germany. This resulted in an invitation to be principal guest conductor for the Youth Orchestra of Germany in 1976, 1978 and 1980 and guest conductor for the Australian Youth Orchestra from 1981 to 1984.

FEATURED SOLOIST Roy Bogas first performed with the San Francisco Symphony at 14. His early training in New York was with the Polish virtuoso Moriz Rosenthal who carried the traditions of the Romantic era, having studied with Franz Liszt as well as a Chopin pupil, Carl Mikuli. Rosenthal spent much time living in Vienna, as did another Polish pianist, Adolph Baller, with whom Bogas has also worked.

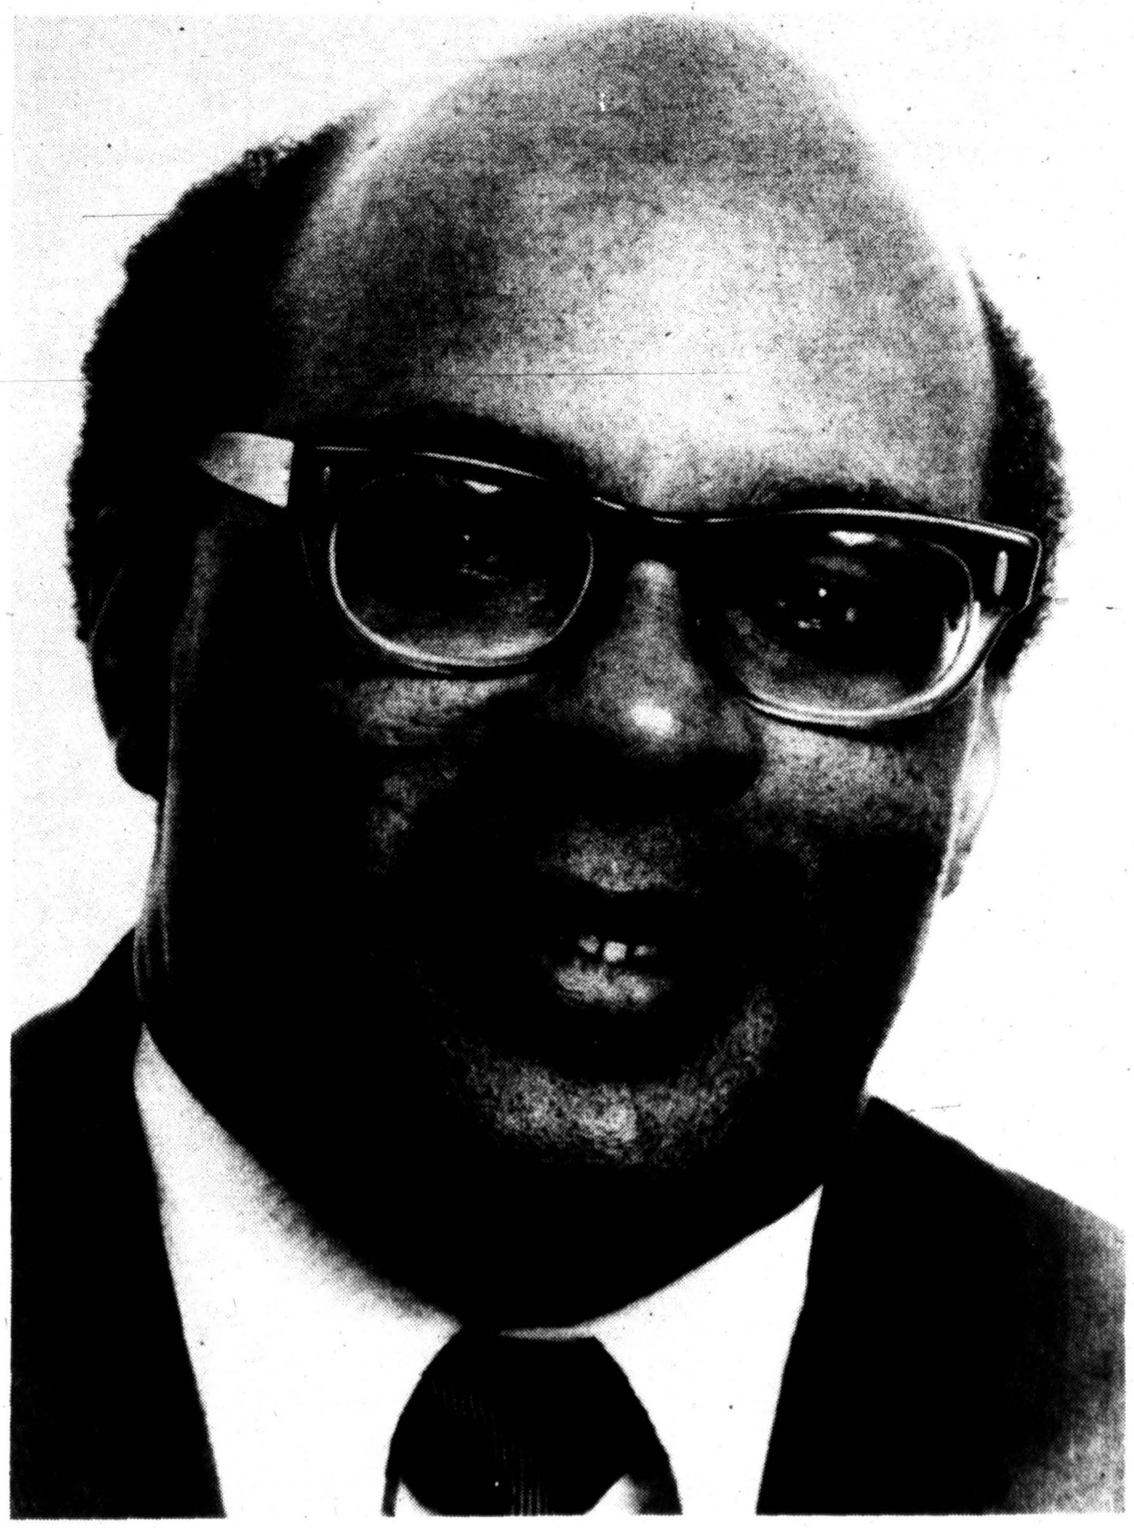
His principal study during his teen years was with Ada Clement, founder of the San Francisco Observatory of Music and a disciple of Russian pianist Josef Lhevinne and the German pianist Harold Bauer.

Bogas is known to Monterey Peninsula audiences through his appearances at the Carmel Bach Festival and as a recitalist with the Keyboard Artist Series. He has performed many times under the baton of Denis de Coteau in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Athens, Jerusalem and elsewhere.

The pianist has been re-engaged to play Brahms' D Minor Piano Concerto with the Belgrade Philharmonic at their Brahms Festival next May.

Admission to the 8 p.m. concerts is $15 per person at the door. It is $12.50 for those who purchase a $37.50 season ticket for the remaining three concerts. Seating is open in Salinas, reserved in Carmel. Group rates are available at both locations.

For more information or reservations, contact the Monterey Bay Symphony office, Box 146, Carmel, CA 93921, or call 372-6276 or 424-5502.



DENIS DE COTEAU, music director and conductor of the San Francisco Ballet, will lead the Monterey Bay Symphony in concerts in Carmel and Monterey. Featured works will include Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue and Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 21.

Group examines 'Seven Tasks of Later Life'

How does nature advise us to get the most out of our lives?

That is one of the questions under discussion at the workshop slated for 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 14 at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

Titled "The Seven Tasks of Later Life," the participants will review the essay by two Jungian analysts who practice in San Francisco — Bruce Baker and Jane Wheelwright.

Their thesis, often seen as the central focus of Jung's psychology, is that the greatest potential for growth and self-realization exists in the second half of life. The authors define later life as age 50 or more.

Then they outline the seven tasks; which include:

- The need to review, reflect upon, and sum up our lives;
- Unloading self-imposed burdens by realizing the finite limits of the many things we want to do;
- Letting go of the dominance of the ego;
- Finding the reason for our individual existence;
- Engaging our unused potential — finding what it is that transcends life and death — creativity.

This is the fourth in the winter series of events sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung. The group is an informal association of people who are finding mutual support while enlarging their knowledge of Jung's ideas.

Discussing Jung's insights with others helps them make translations to their everyday lives, according to Joseph Pagano, a spokesman for the group.

Registration for the event is $10 and may be accomplished at the door.

For further information, call 649-8809; or write 853 Pacific St. Monterey, CA 93940.

Dancers to be auditioned for local ensemble

Choreographer Gaye-Mikel Bennett will audition Monterey Peninsula dancers for dance performance training. According to Bennett, she will train a dance team that will ultimately seek employment in professional productions, commercials and dance-video entertainment.

The auditions are scheduled 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 14 at the Carmel American Legion Hall. Participants should be prepared to dance. They should bring water, towel, resume, and — if possible — a photograph. The audition time may extend past 7:30 p.m.

The director is searching for local dancers with high kicks, controlled extensions, gymnastic qualities, good spine undulations and dedication. Particularly needed are men and women with jazz, ballet and/or Afro-Haitian training.

Gaye-Mikel Bennett received her initial ballet and jazz training from Dorothy Percival, founder and artistic director of the San Joaquin Concert Ballet.

She also studied at several private studios and colleges. She was an original member of the Monterey Peninsula Dance Theatre.

For additional information about Friday's auditions, call 625-5598.

dancers which introduces young people to the fun and discipline of dance," Curtis explained.

Workshops in dance and choreography, team-taught by Curtis and ensemble members, usually follow the lecture/-performance. Participants in the workshops explore both the elements of dance as well as some of the choreographic devices presented in the performances.

Dance Reach founder and director Curtis came to the UCSC Theater Arts program to teach dance from the faculty of Ohio State University. A former assistant to Pauline Koner and member of the Pauline Koner Dance Consort, Curtis has performed, taught and choreographed in New York City and throughout the United States.

ON STAGE

The Marriage of Bette and Boo

The Monterey Peninsula College Players will stage the West Coast premiere of The Marriage of Bette and Boo by Christopher Durang. Durang's most recent work follows Bette and Boo from their wedding day on through married life. As in other Durang plays, the seemingly conventional characters and situations change into something sometimes bizarre, sometimes hilarious, sometimes profound.

A personal appeal to Durang by student director Sheryl Griggs enabled MPC to stage the first amateur production of the play, and the first West Coast production, amateur or professional.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Nov. 13-15 in the SRO Theatre on campus. Admission is $4 general, $2 for season ticket holders. MPC warns that the subject matter of the play may be objectionable to some adults and children. Information: 646-4213 or 649-5561.

Toad of Toad Hall

The rarely performed Toad of Toad Hall, adapted by A.A. Milne from Kenneth Graham's The Wind in the Willows, opens Friday, Nov. 14 at the York School Theater.

Milne's adaptation for the stage focuses on a very specific part of the famous children's story, and on the character lovingly called "Mr. Toad." Nick Zanides directs the production which features York School senior Daniel Harray in the lead role. Steve Tosh will perform the music, and Akemi Ito directs the choreography.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 14-15, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16. The York School Theater is located near Laguna Seca on Highway 68 at York Road.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $2 for children 18 and under, and are available at the door or through Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561.

Murder at the Howard Johnson's

The romantic entanglements of a used car salesman; his wife and their dentist are the focus of the comedic Murder at the Howard Johnson's, opening Friday, Nov. 14.

Presented by Terpsichore Productions, the play features John Prejean, Linda Prejean and John Macy.

Murder at the Howard Johnson's begins at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Trail and Saddle Club House, located at the end of East Garzas Road in Carmel Valley. Tickets are $7. Cocktails, soda, coffee and snacks will be available from 7 p.m. on.

To get to the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club from the peninsula or Salinas, turn right on Boronda Road off Carmel Valley Road and continue on Boronda until reaching East Garzas. The club is located approximately one-quarter mile down East Garzas Road. For information or reservations, call 659-2882.

Lingo America

Poet and storyteller Taelen Thomas appears in this one-man production that reflects wisecracks and attitudes of American writers. Lingo America, a presentation of the Poetic Drama Institute, includes a tale of the Dempsey/Fripo fight, the oral tradition of the American hobo and cowboy, and the truth about Clementine.

It plays 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 18, at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center, 320 Hoffman (at Lighthouse) in New Monterey. Tickets are $5. For reservations call 649-6852 or 649-5561.

One-Act Play Festival

The one-act play festival continues with a sampler of works by peninsula playwright Jean Ackermann at The Western Stage, headquartered in Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas.

Staged Thursday through Saturday, Nov. 13-15, will be Ackermann's Anniversary, directed by Betty Dayton; Auld Lang Syne, directed by Pennie Nichols and Stand-off at Bear Valley, directed by Joyce Lower.

Fifth of July

A group of former student activists reflect on the changes in their lives and attitudes since leaving college in Lanford Wilson's Fifth of July, continuing at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center.

Dan Gotch directs the play, which features Jim Webber as Ken and Ron Cohen as his lover, Jed. They are visited by Ken's sister, June (Mickie Mosley Braun) and her teenage daughter (Danielle Walkup). The cast also features Dorian Ellis, David Miller, Florence Mason and James Brady.

Toad surprise

DANIEL HARRAY portrays Mr. Toad in the York School production of Toad of Toad Hall. The play is adapted by A.A. Milne from Kenneth Graham's The Wind in the Willows.

Fifth of July will be staged at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays until Nov. 22. A Sunday matinee will be staged at 2 p.m. on Nov. 16.

Ticket prices on Fridays and Saturdays are $7.50 general, $6 for students and persons over age 55. On Thursday and Sunday tickets are $6.50 general and $5 for students and seniors over 55. Due to sexual themes and strong language, the production is recommended for adults. In addition, because of the staging of the production, there will be no late seating. Reservations: 649-5561 or 649-6852.

Candida

The Staff Players Repertory Company opens its new season with Candida, Shaw's answer to A Doll's House. First presented in 1898, Candida provides Shaw's view of a happy marriage and what makes it work. A young poet then appears and views the entire matter with different eyes.

Philip Clarkson portrays the Socialist preacher James Morell. His wife, Candida, is played by Manuela Shaw. The young poet, Eugene Marchbanks, is portrayed by Norman Stottmeister.

Marcia Gambrell Hovick directs Candida. It will play at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 2:30 p.m. Sundays at the Indoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. The run will continue through Nov. 22. Tickets are $7 for adults and $5 for senior citizens and full-time students. For reservations, call 624-1531.

Follies

Follies, a musical by James Goldman and Stephen Sondheim, continues its run at The Wharf Theater in Monterey. Directed by Larry Ayo, Follies is a celebration of the present that confronts the past. The musical builds upon the reunion of two former Follies showgirls and their husbands, each a former stage door johnny. Their party chatter gives way to deeper reflection and confrontation with personal, self-deluding "follies."

Follies will be staged at 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 8 p.m. Sundays through Nov. 16. Tickets are $10 and $8. The theater is on Old Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey. Reservations: 372-2882.

JOHN MACY, John Prejean and Linda Prejean reprise their roles in the comedic, Murder at the Howard Johnson's. A farcical mirror of contemporary America, the comedy opens Friday, Nov. 14 at the Trail and Saddle Clubhouse in Carmel Valley. The production was staged in July with the same cast. For information or reservations, call 659-2882.

Writers converge locally for literary jamboree

The 1986 Writers' Jamboree will be a "literary event of the year" on the Monterey Peninsula, according to its sponsors.

Authors and editors from all parts of the central coast, and some from as far away as New York and Los Angeles, will converge on the offices of Monterey Life magazine and the Thunderbird Bookshop in Carmel on Saturday, Nov. 22. All of the programs are open to the public.

Two seminars are planned for the afternoon, and an evening book signing party with wine and hors d'oeuvres will follow. The first seminar offering is "Writing for Love and Money," a panel discussion on professional magazine writing.

"Writing for Love and Money" at 1 p.m. is followed by "Lit Biz 101, The Business of Literature" at 3 p.m. "Lit Biz" is a seminar for authors of books. It examines the business of "how to market your book to a publisher and get it to its readers." The seminar is chaired by Raymond Mungo, author of eight books from major publishers, and William Web, and publishers' representative for the Western states for Wilcher Associates.

Both seminars will take place at the offices of Monterey Life magazine in downtown Monterey. Admission is $10 per seminar for the general public.

The Thunderbird Bookshop in Carmel will be the scene of the Writers' Jamboree book signing social from 7 to 10 p.m. Some authors flying in from other parts of the country will be accommodated through the courtesy of the Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row. Wines have been donated by the Hacienda, Buena Vista and Korbel wineries of Sonoma. The public is invited to attend the Jamboree for a ticket price of $15 ($10 for seniors/-students).

MUSIC CORNER

By Jo Ann La Torra

Jorge Bolet opens Keyboard Artist Series

THERE HAVE BEEN major alterations in what used to be known as the Bronson Keyboard Series. It is now known as the Keyboard Artist Series, always pianists, and the featured artists have much Bigger Names than heretofore. As with all alterations, there are wins and losses. Among the former is the full house, which had not happened before. Among the latter are the presence of children at the concerts — there used to be quiet a few, but I missed them at Sunday's concert — the opportunity to hear pianists whose names were not household words but nevertheless deserved to be heard. And were willing, on the rare occasion, to take a chance with programming.

Jorge Bolet, recently retired from the Curtis Institute, opened the series last Sunday. He began his program with two late works of Joseph Haydn, the F minor Variations and the E flat major sonata, No. 62 in the revised numbering of Christa Landon (52 in the old Hoboken numbering). Bolet's playing was clean, cautious, and stayed well within the sound framework of Haydn's era.

Schumann's magnificent C major Fantasy, Op. 17, followed. This is a larger-than-life work on several levels: the rhapsodic first movement, the wonderful march of the second movement with its treacherous coda, and the quiet and intense finale. It is taxing on the performer, who may or may not convey that, as they see fit. Bolet, whose technique seems not to have suffered with the years, is virtually devoid of keyboard mannerisms, and navigated the difficulties admirably.

Nevertheless, there was something missing from the music — engagement, intensity, direction, drama. It is difficult to come up with a precise word, but he did not seem to be emotionally or intellectually involved. It was not immediately apparent what he wanted us to hear from the music: lines were not always clear and ideas did not always follow through to conclusions. For only one example, in the last movement of the Haydn sonata, thematic material was frequently lost to passage work — exquisitely played passages, to be sure, but not the principal material.

Bolet seemed much more comfortable with the second half of the program, and the Grieg Ballade in G minor was the high point of the afternoon/evening.

The program closed with Venezia e Napoli of Liszt. Although the date was given as 1839, the titles of the three pieces indicate these are a re-working of four pieces, and date from 1859; the pieces use borrowed themes, a favorite technique of Liszt's. Those scholars who are busy proving that Liszt was a serious and original composer (he could be) will not have their case advanced by these works. They are filled with the bombast one expects, and provided a rousing finish to the concert.

Monterey Sheraton revives spirit of the Cotton Club

IN THE SPIRIT of speakeasies, bootleg booze, guys, dolls and jazz rhythms, the Monterey Sheraton Hotel will recreate the era of the Cotton Club on Saturday, Nov. 15 in celebration of the hotel's second anniversary.

The party is a benefit for the Monterey Rape Crisis Center.

Featuring jazz and blues for dancing, the San Carlos ballroom of the Sheraton will be open from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m., with dancing to begin at 9 p.m. The ballrooms will be transformed for the occasion with an Art Deco motif designed to resemble the old Harlem Cotton Club. The scenario will include "mobsters" scanning guests at the door, a back alley with "bums" and a speakeasy with bathtub gin and a roulette wheel.

The nostalgic mood will be further enhanced by the featured bands providing continuous music throughout the evening. Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers will lead off the dancing, followed by the Ace Hill Trio, Caught in the Act (a vocal group from San Francisco in the Manhattan Transfer style) and ending with the Broadway Blues Band. In addition the Nick Williams Trio will provide entertainment on the mezzanine level of the hotel.

Admission to the Cotton Club is $10. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Concierge Desk in the Monterey Sheraton or at the door the night of Nov. 15. Doors open 8 p.m. The Monterey Sheraton is at 350 Calle Principal in Monterey.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joanne Tenenbaum

How to surprise a critic

AFTER A COUPLE of theaterless weeks (courtesy of a stubborn flu), Lanford Wilson's Fifth of July caught me by surprise. For one thing, the play's title left me cold. Another post-party depression, I thought, with hungover celebrants obsessing on the failed hopes of the past. (The flu never seems to improve my disposition much.)

Indeed, at first glance the set confirmed my worst suspicions. The universal party detritus — empty booze bottles, crumpled cellophane bags, aluminum cans — littered the open set, a prosaic enough farmhouse porch. Great, I thought. Any minute the drunks will stagger in mumbling maudlinspeak.

Waiting for the show to begin, I listened to a series of '60s songs carefully chosen, it seemed to me, to evoke an era of heartbreaking earnestness and near-revolution. Slightly mollified, I watched as a man in his mid-30s made his painful entrance, aided by crutches, then spent the better part of two minutes settling himself into a chair at a small desk.

Thus begins a parade of entrances as carefully orchestrated as a symphony. The handicapped man is Kenneth Talley, a Vietnam veteran, played with quiet skill by Jim Webber. The gentle botanist is Jed Jenkins, Talley's devoted lover, played with equal sensitivity by Ron Cohen.

The flashy city couple are Gwen and John Landis (Dorian Ellis and David Miller), and the exasperated take-charge woman is Kenneth's sister June (Mickey Mosley Braun). The coquettish wraith in evening gown and bare feet, flitting across the porch from time to time is Shirley Talley (Danielle Walkup), June's 15-year-old headstrong daughter. And the dotty old lady is Sally Friedman (Florence Mason), the Talley's displaced aunt, soon to be packed off to a retirement home.

IN THE SEEMINGLY aimless rambling of their conversations, these characters emerge as emblems of a once-radical generation, now working out their places, in '80s society. They do this in the most casual way, revealing themselves in the frankness of the language with which they talk about their past and in the problems with which their present confronts them.

June, who once defied her parents' middle-class values (not least of all by bearing a child out of wedlock) is now frustrated to find herself standing almost precisely in her parents' place, confronted by a teenager who finds her political activism in the '60s not only meaningless, but boring.

Kenneth, who lost his legs fighting in a war he did not believe in, thought he could resume the teaching career he loved but finds instead that he wants only to run away, from students who seem not to see him at all. Without ever straining the point, the playwright shows us that these students symbolize, in turn, a society that does not seem to see the veterans of this unpopular war or to recognize the sacrifices they have made.

The Landises are something else again. Gwen, who flew to demonstrations rather than marching because she never could find comfortable shoes, is at 33 an extravagantly neurotic woman, loud, vulgar, and vulnerable, often on the edge of hysteria. Her commonplaces, too, typify a generation that sought to expand its vision with chemical substances.

"Oh, no, honey," she cautions Shirley, who is examining a pillbox with interest. "One day you're trying to open the pillbox and the next day you're burned out and your hair won't hold a permanent."

John Landis, who sat out the war in Europe, wields uneasy power over his wealthy wife, trading on her wealth and controlling her with his sexuality. David Miller is splendid in the unlikeable part of the idealist who sold out, and Dorian Ellis's Gwen conveys Gwen's emotional instability in a well controlled performance that should not be missed.

Sixty-one-year-old Aunt Sally also emerges as a character who challenged the values of her generation and who retains her sharp eye for hypocrisy and gift for candor, despite the changing times and circumstances. Florence Mason's Sally gets off to a wooden start, but warms up to a solid, engaging performance. Danielle Walkup's Shirley Talley is frankly adorable, capturing perfectly the narcissism and global confidence of early teenage.

Director Dan Gotch's careful reading of the script and sound casting pay off in an ensemble that works very well together and a production that left me with the rare feeling that I was seeing a play as the playwright might have wanted it presented — no holds barred, but no wretched excesses either. And in place of the maudlinspeak I so dreaded, a culmination that leaves its characters a place to stand.

Coast Galleries will celebrate grand opening in Pebble Beach

WHAT BEGAN as a small regional art gallery in Big Sur in 1958 has evolved into three separate galleries. The Coast Gallery — located off Highway 1 in Big Sur and the Coast Gallery, Maui will now be joined by the Coast Gallery in Pebble Beach.

A grand opening celebration for the newest Coast Gallery, located near The Lodge at Pebble Beach, is planned 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16.

The first exhibition will present the works of sculptor Loet Vanderveen and painter Mary Titus. Other artists will display a variety of wildlife and marine art rendered in a range of media including oils, acrylics and water colors as well as etchings, lithographs, posters and sculpture in bronze and gold.

The gallery is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gary Koeppel of Carmel and will be managed by art director Anne Morse of Carmel Valley.

According to owner and curator Gary Koeppel, "Our interest is to provide to the Monterey Peninsula residents, visitors and guests of The Lodge, an affordable and collectable contemporary art collection created by living American artists. We hope that visitors and residents will come to regard Coast Gallery as 'the other reason to come to Pebble Beach.' "

Between photography safaris in Africa and China, Loet Vanderveen works intensely in his central California mountain home where his studio faces both a redwood canyon and the Pacific Ocean.

As a child in Rotterdam, Holland, Vanderveen grew up in a house beside the famed zoo, next door from which came the sounds of various wild animals.

That period has been an enormous influence in the development of his bronze animal sculptures.

Although featured at the opening exhibition, Mary Titus' paintings will be on permanent display at Coast Gallery — Pebble Beach.

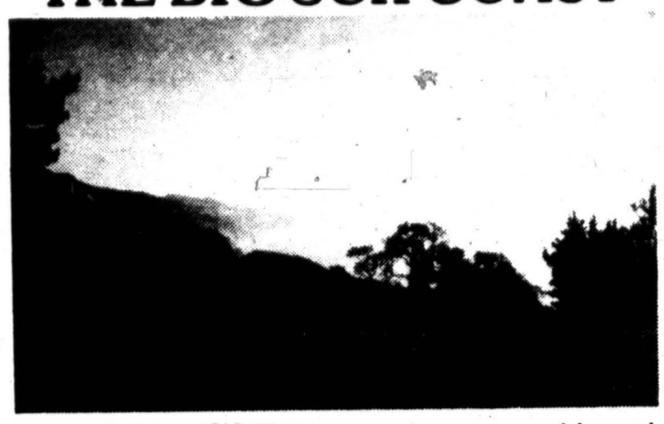
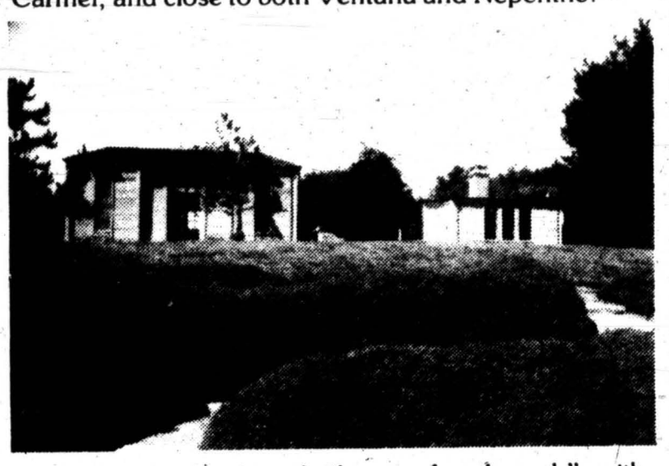
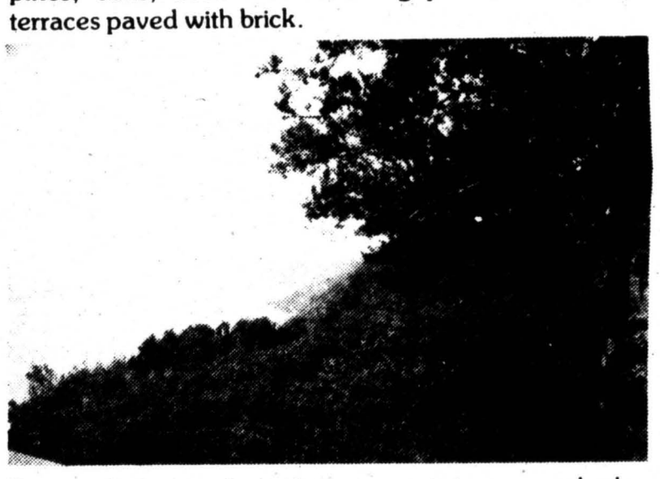
Amid The Magnificence Of THE BIG SUR COAST



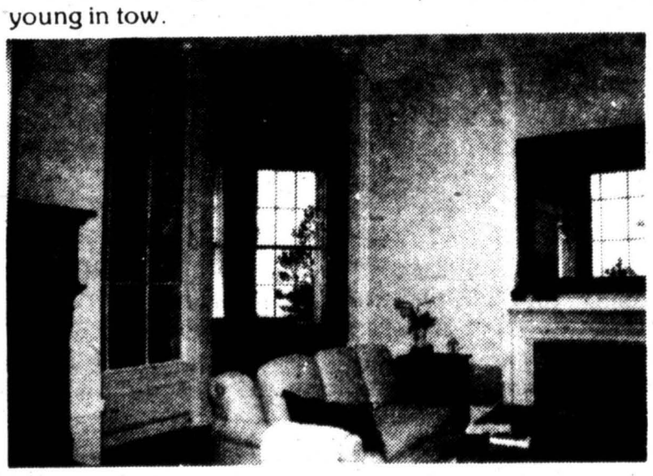
Miles of magnificent view, encompassing surf-fringed shoreline and the seaward sweep of the Santa Lucia Mountains, is a never ending fascination — in the sunny stillness of daytime, sunset glory or mystic moonlight — if you live in this home with guest house on three clifftop acres in Coastlands, a private area on the Big Sur Coast, approximately 30 miles south of Carmel, and close to both Ventana and Nepenthe.



Constructed of selected "heart of redwood," with shingled roofs, the structures exemplify the elegance of the American Federalist period of American architecture. A brick-paved central courtyard separates the main residence from the utility/workshop and guest house with fireplace, bar/kitchen and full bath. Lovely landscaping features lawns, low-care planting, pines, oaks, deck with reflecting pool and cliff-top terraces paved with brick.



From a dining nook on the western terrace, one looks north along the coastline to famed Pfeiffer Point, a haven for yachts and fishing boats, whose lights are friendly beacons each evening. Also from this outlook are viewed the annual migrations of the Gray Whale from the Bering Sea to Baja and back again with young in tow.



Paned windows soaring to 14-foot-high, beamed wood ceilings, polished parquet floors, graceful moldings and manteled fireplace framed in pictorial tiles are dramatic features of the main residence. Newly renovated, the beautifully tiled kitchen and bathrooms offer added elegance to this exceptional property. Contact Hank Adams or Linda Mazet in our Coast Properties Division for your personal tour. $825,000.
